Graduate Student Career Guide 2017-2018

Georgia State University  J. Mack Robinson College of Business  CAREER ADVANCEMENT CENTER
Welcome from
Robinson’s Career
Advancement Center

Congratulations!
The commitment you’ve made to pursue a graduate degree at Robinson is a significant investment in your future!

The Robinson Career Advancement Center (CAC) is dedicated to helping you maximize your investment by facilitating your professional and career development. Whether your goal is to move into the job market for the first time, advance within your current organization, move from one industry to another, or change careers completely, we have the resources to help you get there.

Robinson’s Graduate Student Career Guide provides an overview of the resources available through the CAC. From career assessments to resume templates, cover letter examples to interview prep questions. Your career coach will help you manage your career during your Robinson experience and beyond. Our staff has over 100 years of combined experience in career services, talent acquisition, career mobility, executive search, and human capital. We are dedicated to helping you maximize your career progression.

I strongly recommend you make time to meet your Career Counselor and become familiar with the CAC early in your program. We find students who regularly utilize our resources are significantly more successful in the job and internship search process. Students who make the most of their Robinson experience also join student organizations, get to know faculty members individually, attend guest speaking events, and build their networks – and we encourage you to do the same.

Where should you start?
Handshake is the online job board used by Georgia State University! With Handshake you can schedule one to one appointments with your career counselor, post your resume for campus interviews, RSVP to attend upcoming events, apply for jobs and internships, and access password protected online career support databases available to students.

Handshake is not just another job board. It is THE place employers and alumni go to actively source Robinson students and alumni for jobs and internships. Handshake helps you connect with employers and alumni seeking Robinson students for jobs and internships. If it’s posted in Handshake, employers are actively seeking Robinson talent!

Check out Handshake, read the CAC e-Newsletter, and join the Robinson Career Network on LinkedIn!

Handshake typically has 1750-2000 active jobs and internships postings with 300-500 new postings weekly. In addition, we also send a weekly career e-newsletter to all Robinson students highlighting CAC events, resources and current openings in Handshake. Last, but not least, be sure to join the Robinson Career Network on LinkedIn!

We look forward to helping you advance your career!

Sincerely,

Jason Aldrich, Ed.D.

CAC Student Policies

Professionalism
Students and alumni who participate in Robinson CAC events and utilize our services and resources are expected to behave with the highest degree of professionalism. This includes excellent business etiquette, high-quality communication, and representing yourself honestly in our systems and throughout your resume. The following policies have been developed in order to provide Robinson students and alumni with information on how to meet these expectations.

When do Career Advancement Center Services begin and end?
The Career Advancement Center (CAC) is committed to proactively helping Robinson College of Business students and alumni manage their career, develop excellent job search skills and connect with high-quality job opportunities.

Robinson College of Business (RCB) students have access to CAC services beginning their first official day of class. Individuals needing career advice or services prior to their first day of class are encouraged to contact their undergraduate career center for guidance until they’ve begun classes at Robinson.

Who is ELIGIBLE to utilize grad services of the CAC? The following students are eligible beginning their first official day of class:

- Graduate students enrolled in a degree program.
- Students enrolled in graduate courses in a certificate program.
- Robinson alumni continue to have access to the CAC for up to 1 year after graduation.

*Degree programs include: Flex MBA, Professional MBA, Specialized Master's (MS), Executive MBA and certificate programs

Who is NOT ELIGIBLE to utilize services of the CAC?
- Individuals who have applied to or been accepted into an RCB program but who have not started taking classes
- Students in GSU colleges outside of the Robinson College of Business
- Students studying as part of an Exchange program who are taking classes for two semesters or less can utilize the CAC’s online resources and Handshake. However, students do not have access to career coaches.

Appointments with Robinson CAC Staff
Students and alumni meeting or communicating with our staff are expected to do so in a professional manner. In addition, we expect you to show up for scheduled phone or in-person appointments on time. If you need to reschedule, please do so at least 24 hours prior to the appointment by contacting our staff via email (using your GSU student email address).

Handshake - Account Usage
Access to Handshake is provided exclusively to currently enrolled Robinson College of Business (RCB) students and RCB alumni. Individual account holders are prohibited from sharing their access to the system with other individuals (GSU or external). Dishonestly changing your profile or resume in order to gain access to jobs, campus interviews or events is prohibited.

Violating this policy may result in losing access to Robinson CAC services and events including Handshake and interviewing privileges.
CAC Student Policies, continued...

Interview and Information Session No-Show Policy
The CAC provides students with the opportunity to participate in on-campus recruiting events. Through this opportunity, students can apply for internships and full-time positions through Handshake.

As an integral part of the screening and selection process, students will have the opportunity to schedule on-campus interviews through Handshake. It is important that students maintain professional business communications throughout the interview process.

No-Show Policy
Failure to appear for a scheduled interview or an information session you have RSVP’d to attend is a discourtesy that recruiters and the Robinson Career Advancement Center take very seriously. A significant number of no-shows may result in recruiters not returning to campus permanently affecting Robinson College of Business students seeking employment.

If you are unable to attend a campus interview or information session for any reason (emergencies of any kind), you must cancel 24 hours prior to the scheduled event via Handshake. Failing to cancel interviews in time or failing to appear for scheduled interviews may result in losing access to Robinson CAC services and events including Handshake and interviewing privileges.

Conduct with Employers
The Robinson CAC regularly hosts employers conducting interviews, holding information sessions or participating as guest speakers in a variety of events. Many of these events require students be invited to participate. It is not acceptable to attend events you have not been invited to. For example, attempting to visit employers who are in the CAC conducting campus interviews for openings you have not been invited to interview for is prohibited. This also includes site visits and employer socials & mixers.

In addition, once you arrive at an event, you are expected to stay for the duration. For example, it is not acceptable to leave in the middle of an information session if you determine the organization is not a good fit for your career goals.

Furthermore, attending events and repeatedly asking employers questions regarding why you were not selected for an interview or hired is unprofessional and may result in recruiters not returning to campus and permanently affecting future Robinson College of Business students seeking employment.

This type of behavior may result in losing access to Robinson CAC services and events including Handshake and interviewing privileges.

Communication via E-mail Notices
We use GSU e-mail addresses to notify current students about newly posted positions, upcoming deadlines or last minute changes to interview schedules. We will not send e-mails to an alternate address. It is YOUR responsibility to check your GSU e-mail account and/or manage the forwarding of e-mail sent to your GSU e-mail account.
Professional Development and Career Advancement - Roles and Responsibilities

The Robinson College of Business is committed to supporting our students’ professional development needs by providing outstanding curricular and co-curricular experiences. Our role is to employ great faculty and staff who proactively engage students in and out of the classroom with rigorous and relevant content, cutting edge resources, and individual support.

Robinson supports students’ career advancement by providing a wide range of professional development and co-curricular activities. Professional development opportunities include, but are not limited to, guest speakers, student organizations, boot camps, case student competitions, and professional association conferences. Career advancement opportunities include, but are not limited to, individual career coaching, job/internship postings, on-campus interviews, information sessions, panel discussions, workshops, career fairs, corporate site visits, and access to online resources.

As a Robinson College of Business student, we expect you to demonstrate professional behavior and assume responsibility for your actions. Professionalism is demonstrated by following the standards for professional behavior outlined below. By adhering to these standards, Robinson students will gain practical experience demonstrating the type of professional behavior with university employees and employers, which is expected in the workplace. In addition, we expect students to follow these guidelines and to serve as ambassadors of the college with alumni, employers and community members engaged in our professional development and career advancement activities.

Your success strategy is simple. We provide you the tools to get yourself ready for the labor market, and you are responsible to take advantage of these opportunities for your own professional development and career advancement. You must proactively engage the professional development and career advancement activities we sponsor, take advantage of college resources to identify employment opportunities, and agree to individual coaching when we offer it to you. We are here to help, but you have to drive your own career!

Event Attendance

Professionalism begins with keeping commitments. Robinson students are expected to communicate with faculty, staff, and employers if/when they are unable to fulfill prior commitments. The Career Advancement Center (CAC) and the Office of Graduate Recruitment and Student Services (GRSS) host a wide array of professional development opportunities, which include information sessions, workshops, and annual signature CAC events. Once registered for an event, students are expected to arrive on-time wearing proper business attire.

In the unfortunate event of an emergency and a student is unable to attend an event he/she has registered, the student should immediately contact his/her career coach to discuss the circumstances. We ask students to provide the CAC and/or event host with written notice for cancelation at least 24 hours or one full business day before the event.

First Occurrence: E-mail notification of failure to properly communicate absence
Second Occurrence: Email warning that admittance to future events are in jeopardy
Third Occurrence: Student will be encouraged to ask the host for permission to attend workshops

Coaching Appointments

Students are expected to arrive on time for scheduled appointments. Students who are unable to make an appointment should cancel at least 24 hours in advance by calling or emailing their designated career coach. A student arriving more than 10 minutes late for a scheduled appointment without contacting their career coach in advance will lose their appointment and will be asked to reschedule.

First Occurrence: E-mail notification of the failure to properly cancel or reschedule the appointment
Second Occurrence: Two week waiting period before rescheduling
Third Occurrence: Remediation conversation with career coach
Coaching Relationship
Each student is assigned a designated career coach upon entry to the program. Students are encouraged to work with their assigned career coach. Students who have an interest in reassignment are asked to make a formal request to their current coach and the coach they are interested in working with. Students should not seek assistance from more than one career coach.

First Occurrence: Notification email from assigned career coach
Second Occurrence: Remediation meeting
Third Occurrence: Loss of coaching privileges

Corporate Site Visits
The career coaches provide students with the opportunity to visit corporate offices in a number of industries. Corporate site visits offer students the chance to learn more about different companies in Atlanta and network with individuals from the firms. When students sign up for corporate site visits, it is a commitment to the company that said student will be in attendance. Should a student need to cancel, they should do so five business days before the scheduled office visit. No shows for corporate site visits will result in the following:

First Occurrence: Student should submit a letter of apology to the employer within 48 hours of the occurrence (reviewed by Career Coach)
Second Occurrence: Loss of eligibility for future corporate site visits

Student On-Campus Interviewing & Recruiting Policies
The CAC provides students with the opportunity to participate in on-campus recruiting events. Through this opportunity, students can apply for internships and full-time positions through Robinson Career Connection (RCC).

As an integral part of the screening and selection process, students will have the opportunity to schedule on-campus interviews through RCC. It is important that students maintain professional business communications throughout the interview process. If you are unable to attend an interview, you should cancel the interview by calling the CAC at (404) 413-7155 and/or by emailing Brent Winner at bwinner@gsu.edu.

In the unfortunate event of an emergency and a student is unable to attend the scheduled interview, students should communicate their emergency to the CAC at (404) 413-7155.

In the event of a no show, the student is asked to submit a letter of apology to the employer within 48 hours of the occurrence (reviewed by Career Coach).

Reporting Career Outcomes Data
The Robinson College of Business regularly collects career outcomes data from students. All Robinson students are expected to provide this data to the college in order to support our commitment to continuous improvement. The data we collect is reported in aggregate form and is utilized by the college to support accreditation, admissions, rankings, career advancement and departments.

Rescinding Offers
If a student has verbally committed to or formally signed documentation accepting an offer, all job/internship search activities should be discontinued. Once a student has accepted a position, it is a commitment to the employer. Should a student not honor that commitment, at a minimum it will result in a remediation meeting with the student’s assigned career coach. Additional actions may be warranted depending the circumstances of individual cases.
Getting Started

Three easy steps to access CAC resources
Whether you’re new to the Robinson College of Business or near graduation, the Career Advancement Center is here to help you launch your career! Make a commitment to your career success today with these three easy steps:

1. Upload your resume in Handshake
   Handshake FAQ’S and LOGIN instructions can be found on the next page.

2. Individual Appointments Meet in-person or virtually with your Career Counselor.
   Developing a relationship with our staff is the key to maximizing the resources available to you via the CAC.
   - To set up an appointment, please log in to Handshake and click on “Appointments.”
   - Career Counselors have appointment times in Handshake where you can select a convenient time.
   - You can contact your career counselor directly via email – please see our staff directory.
   - Or, contact the CAC via phone at 404-413-7155.

3. Mark Your Calendar – Make plans now to attend upcoming workshops, panel discussions, and career events by reviewing the CAC online calendar at: robinson.gsu.edu/cac/

Maximize CAC Recruiting Events, Activities and Resources

1. ATTEND ROBINSON’S CAREER EXPO – Robinson students will have the opportunity to meet hiring representatives from some of the top firms recruiting business students. Employers attending the Business Career Fair are typically looking for all business majors.
   - FALL Career EXPO and Accounting Employer Showcase – 2017
     Friday, Sept. 12 from 11am to 3pm at the Hyatt Regency
   - Graduate Career Fair & Professional Development – 2017
     Friday, Oct. 13 from 9am to 3pm at the Buckhead Center, 8th Floor
   - SPRING Career EXPO and Hospitality Employer Showcase – 2018
     Tuesday, Feb. 18 - Visit robinson.gsu.edu/cac/ for more details.

2. Review the CAC Graduate Student e-Newsletter – sent weekly!
   All Robinson students receive the CAC student e-newsletter on a weekly basis which highlights:
   - Job and Internship postings in Handshake
   - Campus Interviews and Information Sessions
   - Upcoming CAC Events
   - Career Resources, Articles and Advice

3. Participate in On-Campus Recruiting (OCR) Activities - Many offer jobs and internships annually via OCR.
   - Employer Information sessions
   - Campus Interviews
   - Mock Interviews and Resume Reviews with Employers
Handshake FAQ’s

What is Handshake?  Handshake is our online career management system where undergraduate, graduate business students and alumni can post resumes, search for jobs, internships, and submit resumes for campus interview opportunities 24-hours a day, 7-days a week.

Additionally, employers can request on campus interview dates, post jobs and internships, request information sessions, view schedules and register for events such as CAREER EXPO.

- How do I get started?  To login to Handshake follow this link:  https://gsu.joinHandshake.com/login
- How do I access Handshake?  Current students can login to Handshake using the following information.

  1. Click Georgia State University Sign On
  2. Enter Campus ID and password (If you need to, look up campus ID password – campusid.gsu.edu)
  3. Click login

STEP 1 – Update Your Profile and Upload your Resume in Handshake

Update your profile and Upload your Resume – Your first step is to update your profile and upload your resume for review and approval by your CAC Career Counselor. Resumes are reviewed by your assigned career counselor before approval. Reviews can take 48-72 business hours. Additional time may be needed during high volume times such as the start or end of the semester, or before career fairs, or other events.

Resume Samples – The Robinson Student Career Guide contains a variety of resume examples for students. In order to have your resume approved please follow the samples in this guide.

STEP 2 - Use Handshake to make an appointment with your Career Coach

Handshake REGISTRATION – Graduate students are REQUIRED to complete a Student Profile and upload a copy of their most current resume in Handshake before requesting to meet with their Career Coach for the first time.

- From your Handshake Dashboard, click on “Career Counseling” in the blue toolbar.
- This will yield all of the days/times that are available for your coach to meet with you.
- Select a day/time and click “Sign Up” to confirm.
- If the days/times listed do not match your availability, please email your coach to arrange a meeting.
- The first session will involve resume approval and a discussion about your career plans.

Meet with your Career Coach.  There are three ways to receive advice from your Career Coach. The nature of your request will determine the method by which you should contact your Career Coach.

- Email – Do you have a simple request or question that is not of an urgent nature? Please send your Career Coach an email with your needs. You should receive a response within 2-3 business days (e.g. You would like to have an initial review of your resume.)
- Phone call – Do you have a request that is not urgent but requires a timely answer? Please call your Career Coach and leave a detailed message. Leave the name under which you’re enrolled and leave your phone number twice. (e.g. You receive an offer and need advice on assessing the offer.)
- Individual Appointments - Do you need in-depth 1-on-1 assistance with assessment, job search strategies, resumes, cover letters, or mock interview? If so, please go into Handshake and schedule an appointment with the Career Coach who supports your concentration or program.

Handshake Questions?  Please use the campus ID password reset website. If issues persist, please send an email to: robinsongradcac@gsu.edu with “Handshake Access Request” in the subject line”
Career Advancement Center (CAC)

Handshake Student Guide
Logging In:

1. Type the following URL into your address bar: https://gsu.joinHandshake.com/login

2. Press the blue button on the center right of the screen reading, “Georgia State University Sign On”

3. You will be prompted to enter your Campus ID and password.
4. At this point, you are now logged in and you can: Edit Your Profile, Search for Jobs/Internships, Schedule Appointments, or Sign up for Career Events using the following instructions.

Editing Your Profile:

1. To edit your Profile, you can start 1 of 2 ways: first, by selecting the green “Complete my Profile” button on your dashboard; second, by going to “View Your Profile” on the left sidebar.

2. At this point, you will be on your profile page. Here you can include any information you wish under various categories (i.e. Work Experience, Education, Extracurricular Activities, Etc.) by simply pressing the green “Add” buttons on the appropriate section. This information can also be edited later by simply pressing the blue pen icon to the right of entry.

3. Uploading Application Documents: When you’re on your profile page, view the left column “Documents” tab

Searching For Jobs/Internships:

1. From the Dashboard, look to the left sidebar and under the “Jobs and Internships” section you should find the option stating “Jobs”. Select “Jobs”.

2. You will be on the Job Postings page where you can search for both Jobs and Internships using criteria on the left sidebar such as Job Type, Employment Type, Major, Etc.

Scheduling Appointments:

1. From the Dashboard, look to the left sidebar and under the “My University” section and you should find an option stating “Appointments”. Select “Appointments”.

2. At this point, you will be on the Appointments page, and you can view past and upcoming appointments and create new appointments by pressing the blue button stating “Schedule a New Appointment”.
3. After pressing the button “Schedule a New Appointment”, click “J. Mack Robinson College of Business”. Then go through the process of choosing a Category, choosing a Type, and then choosing a Date/Time.
4. At this point, you can then add the Appointment Medium (Face to Face, Phone, or Skype), any notes that you find necessary to communicate to the coach, and a small survey about the appointment.

Signing Up For Career Events:
1. From the Dashboard, look to the left sidebar and under the “Events” section you should find an option stating “Events”. Select “Events”.

2. At this point, you will be on the Events page and you are able to see Events occurring both this month and in the future. Click any Event you’d like to join.
3. After pressing an Event, you will see all information about the event including Location, Time, Description, Etc. To register for the Event, press the “Join Event” button on the top right of the screen.
How can self-assessment help my job/internship search?

- In a job hunt, we’re so busy looking for the next opportunity that we often overlook the assessment phase of career management.
- Assessment gives us the opportunity to understand what motivates and inspires us, what engages our imaginations and gives us the energy to contribute to a work effort.
- Assessment helps us identify our interests and our skills in the context of possible career paths, and gives us the chance to align ourselves professionally with what we like and what we do well.
- There are many tools for measuring professional interests and skills; at the Robinson Career Advancement Center, we use an assessment tool called CareerLeader.

CAREERLEADER ASSESSMENT

CareerLeader is a fully integrated approach to business career self-assessment developed by Dr. Timothy Butler, Director of MBA Career Development Programs at the Harvard Business School, and Dr. James Waldroop, Dr. Butler’s associate at HBS for 18 years. This interactive, online program is currently being used by over 170 top business and MBA programs in the US and around the world to help guide their students.

CareerLeader will:

- Provide you with expert assessments of your unique pattern of business-relevant interests, values and abilities, using three tests we developed.
- Integrate your results, recommending specific career paths that are likely to be your best career path matches, and why you match well.
- Rate your entrepreneurial attributes.
- Provide you with in-depth views into 27 business career paths, including information about the interests, rewards and abilities associated with each one.
- Many career paths also include an in-depth interview with an industry insider, for further insights.
- Help you to understand key elements of corporate culture and how you will fit in with each.
- Recognize and help you to cure your career "Achilles Heels".

How do I access CareerLeader?

- Send an e-mail to your career counselor with “CareerLeader Access Request” in the subject line.

Once you’ve identified your career interests and skills, you’re ready to move toward building a search strategy that will help you secure the next role in your career and build your base of experience.

At this point, you need to focus on four aspects of the job market:

- Ideal industry
- Ideal employers / companies within that industry
- Geography/are you willing to move, and if so, where?
- Ideal roles / functions within one of those companies

Your goal, through online research and informational interviews, will be to build both your general knowledge of your particular market segment and function and your specific knowledge regarding current job opportunities. This will enable you to apply for relevant roles as well as demonstrate your awareness of broader market dynamics as you move into interviews with potential employers.

FOLLOWING YOUR CAREER TIMELINE

As you approach taking the next career step, it is helpful to understand your direction, your speed, your timing and your ultimate destination to ensure that you are headed the right way. The Ongoing Career Advancement section of this handbook will help you determine your career milestones at 5, 10, and 20 year intervals.

This section, however, is focused on the step you are taking today, as a strategic move in a broader plan for your career. The more awareness of your long-term goals that you bring to your current job search effort, the more likely you are to be happy with the job you choose.
ORGANIZING YOURSELF FOR SUCCESS

First things first: Your research will only be valuable to you if you have a way to keep track of your findings and refer to them as needed in your job search. (If you think you don’t need a spreadsheet to remember all the leads you’re pursuing, then you probably aren’t generating enough opportunities to secure your next career move.)

There are two organizational tools you can use: a filing system (either electronic or paper) and a Spreadsheet. Use the filing system to capture information on:

- Industries and sub-sectors (e.g. a healthcare industry folder, with sub-sector folders on pharmaceuticals, medical devices, and hospitals)
- Companies of interest (information such as company profiles, executive bios, articles, financial results, market strategy)
- Functions and roles (e.g. finance & accounting function folder, with sub-sector folders on finance, accounting, controller roles)
- Current job opportunities (company information described above as well as job description and information provided to you by the potential employer)

Use the spreadsheet to capture networking contacts as well as current job opportunities and to track your contact with potential employers, as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Priority</th>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Company</th>
<th>Role Available</th>
<th>Contact Name</th>
<th>Contact Title</th>
<th>Contact Info.</th>
<th>Next step</th>
<th>Deadline</th>
</tr>

</table>

Highlight high-priority opportunities so you don’t overlook them as the list grows, and commit to spending at least 15 minutes a day reviewing your progress and planning for next steps.

NOTE: If you run across jobs that are interesting but for which you aren’t qualified, make a note of possible professional development steps you can take on your Career Plan.

CONDUCTING EMPLOYER RESEARCH

Employer Research Framework
Employers expect you to take the time to research their organization and be prepared to ask thoughtful questions. In order to facilitate your preparation, we have developed this framework to help you synthesize information into an outline that will help you prepare for upcoming interviews.

Part I: Understanding the Organization

Financial Information: Organization structure, profit vs. non-profit, funding sources. What is total revenue? What are their sales trends? What part of this organization is growing?

Key Personnel: Who is the President, CEO? Key GSU Alumni? Any recent additions to senior management team?

History / Mission / Goals: How old are they? What major events shape their history? Where are their headquarters?

Products/Services: What new products or services are being developed? Who are the primary users of these products/services? In what sector of the market are they utilized?

Marketing Strategy: What key brand names do they own? What forms of advertising are used? Are there new initiatives? Where is their product/service sold, distributed, placed against the competition?

Key Clients: Who are they? What important service or product do they supply? Is this company targeting new clients?

Major Competitors: Who are they? How do they compete? Do they have more market share?

Major Trends/Current Events in this Industry: What is the effect of government regulations? New competitors? Technology? Globalization? Latest news reports on the company or on the local or national news that affect the company?

Part II: Understanding the Position

Recruiting Profile/Company Culture: How do they describe themselves? How do they describe the type of person they are looking for? Who do they highlight in the brochure? Where do they recruit? Locations other than your community?

Position Description: Where does this position fit into this organization? What do they want the person in this position to contribute?

Part III: Pulling it all together

How do you fit their profile: What real life examples from your resume demonstrate how your background matches what they are seeking?

How can you help them achieve their goals: What are the key things they want? What are the key things you bring? Find a way to match these up and communicate it effectively.
BRANDING YOURSELF

“They” aren’t in charge of our careers…. “We” are. It is up to us to fashion ourselves.

~ Tom Peters

Once you’ve clearly identified your target industry and market, along with some potential employers and available jobs, it’s time to start marketing yourself. Essentially, you need to prepare the following elements as you enter the job market in pursuit of specific opportunities:

- Cover letter
- Resume
- References
- Personal presentation
- Virtual Branding
- Interview
- Offer and salary negotiation

WRITING A STAND-OUT COVER LETTER

- A cover letter should always be sent with a resume, or follow-up correspondence. It should be read easily and have a conversational tone. Avoid using jargon or stiff wording. Be brief and to the point. A cover letter should not be more than one page in length.

- Follow the rules and layout options of a standard business letter. Use proper grammar and punctuation. Spelling errors are unacceptable! Hand sign your signature above the typed version.

- Whenever possible, address the cover letter to an individual instead of a department or organization. Never address it ‘To Whom It May Concern’. Be sure to spell the individual’s name correctly and obtain the correct title. If you need verification, call the organization.

- When e-mailing a resume, your cover letter serves as the e-mail, and your resume is the attachment.

- Each cover letter should be typed on quality paper. To obtain a professional look, use the same paper as your resume.

- When you are inquiring about a general interest area (you are not aware of specific openings), you may choose a “shotgun” cover letter format (commonly referred to as the “mass mailing” approach). Studies have shown that this format may not be very successful. To increase your chances of receiving a response, personalize each letter and identify your interest in career area(s). Ask for information and initiate the follow-up step. Enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope when asking for information.

- When you are investigating a specific job lead, construct the letter to show your abilities and how they can be applied to the position and organization. Make reference to specific information gleaned from conversations and research. Example: “I am impressed by your continual growth through grant funded activities.” “My academic background in communications, combined with my experience in public relations, has prepared me for the ___position at XYZ.”

Dear Ms. Carlton, OR Dear Hiring Manager or Dear Recruiter

Your first paragraph should state why you are contacting the employer. This is your first opportunity to initiate and build rapport with the employer. This paragraph should be used to capture the interest of the reader. You can also provide information such as: How you found out about the position, who referred you, and for what position you are applying.

Your second paragraph should include information that summarizes your relevant experience, applicable coursework, accomplishments and/or personal achievements that are related to the position. This information is as crucial as the information that is included in your actual resume. Although you may be proud of what you perceive as accomplishments, make careful consideration of what the employer will view as most intriguing. Tailor your cover letter to meet the employer’s needs. This information lets the employer know how your background matches the position. Refrain from writing one general cover letter for all positions. In today’s job market, this tactic does not work.

Your third paragraph should tell the employer that you will follow-up with him/her on a specific date in a specific way. Doing this lets the employer know what to expect. Many job seekers lose out on opportunities because of not wanting to be perceived as overly zealous. Even if you’re told that you are not the appropriate candidate for the job, hearing “no” is preferable to a lingering “maybe.” Be sure to include your phone number and e-mail address.

Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the Human Resources Representative position advertised in the Georgia State University’s online recruiting website, Robinson Career Connection. I will graduate in May with a Bachelor of Business Administration degree in Managerial Sciences from the J. Mack Robinson College of Business at Georgia State University. My academic training combined with my previous work experience make me an excellent candidate for your vacancy.

Through my internship in the Human Resources Department at Russell Reynolds Associates, I acquired an excellent understanding of the responsibilities and expectations associated with working in this field. This knowledge, combined with my computer proficiency (in Windows, Excel, and Access) allows me to be extremely innovative and efficient. Additionally, I developed strong written and verbal communication skills through human resources activities such as drafting job postings, evaluations, and speaking to audiences of over 75 people.

I can be a valuable asset to Vanderbilt Consultants Human Resources Department. At your convenience, please feel free to contact me so I may provide you with additional information about why I would be a great fit for this position. I can be reached at (770) 555-1234.

Regards,

TARGETING YOUR RESUME

A strong, well-targeted resume alone doesn’t get you a job. It does, however, get you through a typical candidate screening process to a first interview. The same principles of resume-writing apply whether you are a seasoned executive or new to the job market, although the organization and verbiage of the resume may differ.

The essential components of a good resume are:

- Your name, address, contact information
- Objective or qualifications summary
- An objective should be used to focus on what you want to do for the employer, describes the skills you want to use on the job, expresses interest in an industry and is a career statement.
- A summary is used in place of objectives when applicant has relevant work experiences and it is a series of statements that express what you have done and who you are.
- Experience (dates of employment, company, title, responsibilities, results)
- Education
- Skills and Accomplishments

Other qualities of a good resume include:

- Clean, legible format (10, 11 or 12 point font sans serif font and one inch margins)
- Succinct review of your work experience; total resume not to exceed 2 pages
- Use of action-oriented verbs to describe your responsibilities
- Listing of quantifiable results in the roles you’ve held
- Descriptions of your responsibilities that “map” easily to the requirements of the role for which you’re applying

It is also important for Web-based resumes, to use variations of keywords that a search engine or web crawler will pick up.

After you have drafted your resume, it is best to let it sit for day or two before editing it. This can be a challenge if you are under a tight deadline, but it will help you to catch errors and improve the structure and language you have used.

As you review your resume, ask yourself the following questions:

- Would I call this candidate for an interview for this job?
- Have I been compelling and accurate in my self-representation?
- Am I describing my experience using language that will be clear to someone who hasn’t worked at the companies where I have worked?

It’s ideal to have one or two trusted colleagues or friends review both your resume and the job announcement or description and suggest how you can strengthen it before you submit your application; their advice could be the difference between a first interview and a letter of rejection.

Resume Writing for Graduate Students
The key to writing a great resume is understanding how resumes are read and what employers are looking for at the first scan of your resume. Having this knowledge helps to increase the chances that your resume is noticed.

KNOW THE POSITION’S REQUIREMENTS!

Your job is to make it easy for the reader to view you as a competitive candidate by clearly demonstrating the Knowledge, Skills, and Abilities (KSA’s) you have that are relevant to the requirements outlined in the job description or function.
Your job is to make it easy for the reader to view you as a competitive candidate by clearly demonstrating the Knowledge, Skills, and Abilities (KSA's) you have that are relevant to the requirements outlined in the job description or function.

There are specific core knowledge, skills, abilities, and levels of experience associated with every job. Read job descriptions carefully and pay particular attention to them. Know the KSA’s relevant to the function of your career choice. Use the information as a starting point to address the employer's needs.

Crafting quantitative and results-oriented bullet points around the specific needs of the employer will help you create a more focused message. Employers review your resume for one thing and one thing only—to see what you have that is relevant to the requirements of the position. If you don’t tell them, they will not know, and more importantly, will not try to guess.

- LAUNDRY ANYONE? Your resume should not be a "laundry list" of responsibilities from your previous positions. Employers only care about the specific KSA’s you have that are relevant to the job to which you’re applying. Bullet points should quantify information and demonstrate results where possible. Never write a resume in first person (“I did this” or “I did that”).

- TO TELL OR NOT TO TELL: Do not try to tell everything you’ve ever done in every position you’ve held. If some responsibilities from previous positions are not relevant to the job for which you’re applying, do not mention them. At a minimum, downplay the information by making it the last couple of bullet points. Too much irrelevant information detracts from the focused message you really want to deliver.

- USE STRONG ACTION-ORIENTED VERBS: Use action-oriented verbs which grab the reader’s attention and make your resume pop. The use of action verbs implies progress. A list of Action-Oriented verbs is provided within this section preceding the Sample Resumes.

- WHAT DO EMPLOYERS REALLY WANT TO KNOW? At the initial resume screening, the recruiter wants to know the KSA’s you have that are directly relevant to the position to which you are applying. Again, the job description tells you exactly what they are seeking and is an excellent indicator of the types of information that should go into your resume.

  NOTE: Individuals with limited relevant work experience OR career changers should consider adding one of the following categories: relevant coursework, MBA projects, relevant volunteer work or leadership positions held in organizations.

- HOW WILL YOU KNOW WHEN YOU HAVE WRITTEN A COMPETITIVE RESUME? It’s simple:
  1) The content specifically addresses the employer’s needs that are mentioned in the job description.
  2) Information is quantified, when possible, to help place it in perspective for the reader.
  3) You can demonstrate results.

- DO NOT USE PARAGRAPHS to describe your job responsibilities. Bullet points are much easier to read.

- WHEN IS MORE THAN ONE VERSION OF A RESUME NECESSARY? You must write more than one resume when the jobs to which you are applying are in different functions, require vastly different knowledge, skills, or abilities (e.g.: The content for an IT position will look and read very different from a Marketing Research position).

- ARE YOU A NEW GRADUATE, NEW TO AN INDUSTRY, OR A CAREER CHANGER? - Your ‘Education’ should be at the top or your resume. Focus on transferable skills – Skills you used in previous jobs, which could be transferred to a new industry (e.g.: customer relations management, logistics, financial reporting, analytical, quantitative etc.).

PREPARING FOR A CAREER FAIR

How do I prepare for a career fair?

Getting the most out of career fairs starts well before the event. It begins with preparation — knowing yourself, your skills, qualifications, interests, values, goals, and career areas of interest. In addition, identifying employers you want to talk to and learning something about them is important. Last, but not least, you’ll need to prepare a resume and dress for success! Here are some additional tips to help you prepare.

1. Dress in professional attire!
   - Men: A dark suit, white shirt, conservative tie, and dark, polished dress shoes.
   - Women: A professional suit, possibly dark colored also. A low-heel pump is very practical. Minimal jewelry.
   - A portfolio may be carried to hold copies of your resume and to take notes.
   - Conservative attire is recommended because your goal is for employers to remember you, not your clothes!

2. Come prepared – resumes in hand and questions in mind!
   - Research the employers you are interested in and prepare questions to ask organization representatives. Company websites are a great place to start and you can find links to many employer websites on the Career Center website.
   - Be sure your nametag is on!
   - Be prepared to tell them about your major, your year in school (senior, junior, etc.), and your professional interests.

3. Be Assertive and Positive!
   - Smile! Introduce yourself in a confident manner, offer a firm handshake, and offer them a copy of your resume.
   - Sell your skills, major, coursework, GPA, work experiences, and extra-curricular activities in relation to their needs!
   - Highlight your interest in their organization by discussing the research you’ve done about their organization, and how your qualifications and career goals fit into their culture.
   - Don’t forget to collect business cards and company literature.

4. Speak with as many representatives as possible.
   - You will probably recognize many of the organizations by name, but there will be many you won’t. Don’t let that stop you from speaking with their representatives.
   - You may be interested in an organization, but they may not list your major as one they’re interested in. Don’t let that stop you from visiting their table, either. Representatives will often pass your resume onto a different department or division within their organization, or provide you with the name of a person to contact.

5. Follow up!
   - Send a thank you letter or e-mail to employer representatives you are interested in, thank them for their visit to campus, discuss your qualifications, and reiterate your interest!
   - Make sure you have completed your profile and have an approved resume on the Handshake so you can apply for campus interviews.
   - To get started, visit our website at robinson.gsu.edu/cac/.
POLISHING YOUR PERSONAL PRESENTATION

Research shows that it only takes a fraction of a second to make a first impression – but that impression will stay with the person you meet during an interview, and if it isn’t good, you may not have enough time to correct it before the interview ends and the job search closes on another candidate.

How you come across when meeting people for the first time involves a complex matrix of factors such as etiquette, grooming, self-confidence, and character. It is worth understanding where you perform strongly in these areas and where you need to improve, and you can do this with the help of a trusted friend, colleague, or career coach. If you are weak in any area of personal presentation, it affects the entire picture of who you are.

Etiquette:
Etiquette is something that we practice constantly, whether or not we realize it. Our greetings, conversations, correspondence, meals and travel are opportunities to become more aware of how we come across professionally and where we stand to improve.

Take a moment to review the following:

- Everyday courtesies that you extend to others
- Your attitude, particularly in the face of challenging or unplanned situations
- Your choice of words
- Your choice of conversation content
- How well you verbalize support for colleagues’ and friends’ efforts
- How well you listen

If an honest self-assessment tells you that you are a courteous, positive, well-spoken, sensitive, and supportive colleague who listens well and often, then you are on your way to success in the job market.

Most of us, however, have areas in which we need to improve – and the more time we spend raising our awareness and raising the bar on our behavior, the sooner we’ll start making a good impression 100% of the time.

For help in understanding where you need to improve in terms of etiquette, seek out a trusted friend, colleague, or career coach from whom you are willing to take constructive criticism, and ask for three things that you should (1) keep doing; (2) stop doing; and (3) start doing. It’s a good strategy for receiving balanced feedback that you can use to improve your professional impact.

A more in-depth discussion of etiquette appears in the Graduate Student Supplement.

Self-confidence

It takes less than a minute for the people we meet to make a head-to-toe assessment of us – and during that time non-verbal cues and tone of voice make up at least 90% of any spoken message we deliver.

It’s important to understand how you come across in a first meeting, because you always run the risk of leading with too much confidence and getting labeled as aggressive or leading with too little confidence and getting labeled as shy – neither of which is a sought-after executive quality.

If you learn how to read people and situations accurately and adapt your responses accordingly, you’ll do well in interviews. It takes practice, but if you seek honest feedback from trusted friends, colleagues, or a career coach, you’ll master the art of conveying self-confidence.

- A twin sweater set in neutral colors, cotton button-down shirts in solids and stripes, mix-and-match knit separates, wool turtlenecks, tailored blouses, or a lightweight wool blazer (optional)
- Skirt or slacks in a neutral color
- A tailored pantsuit or a tailored dress with sleeves or jacket
- Casual, low-heeled shoes or flats, no sandals
Managing Your Virtual Brand

The explosion of social media sites has significant implications for job seekers!

Did you know the majority of prospective employers and recruiters regularly visit social media sites to source candidates and learn more about potential hires they interview?

“How clear is your Social Media Background?”

Did you know: More employers are using firms that check applicants’ social media history.

Your Facebook profile picture is of you holding a rifle. You post on your Twitter feed: “I really hope these pills help to knock me out, because I sure need them.”

Each of these may be innocent: The rifle is registered. You are the president of the local National Rifle Association. You just had a tooth pulled and were just given pain medicine. Even so, you would fail a Social Media Check.

What is it? The social media check is becoming an automatic part of the hiring process, just as criminal background checks and drug tests. Employers regularly run quick Google searches on applicants. Organizations are contracting with corporations across the country to institute standard social media background checks.

What do they look for? Anything that will make you a questionable hire: flagrant display of weapons, sexually explicit photos, racist remarks, references to drug use, statements supporting violence, etc.

Remember, fads come and go. Social media is no different. Remember Myspace? We may not realize the personal trail we leave on the Internet that can come back and hurt us in the future.

The checks reveal bad tracks you’ve left online, but they can only find what you’ve left behind. If a potential employer flags your social media history, you have no one to blame but yourself.

———A job candidate should spend as much time polishing an online profile as he or she does choosing the perfect suit for an interview.

How can you create a positive online presence?
Participate in various industry blogs. Join Professional Associations.

Join professional social media sites such as LinkedIn: www.linkedin.com.

Sites exist that can run background checks for individuals who want to see whether they have a clean bill of online health.

Many sites will charge a fee, but it is worth it to see what is out there.

REMEMBER: It may not be a bad thing to document your life and personality online. Just remember that a potential employer may not think those status, tweet, or blog updates discussing unlawful activity is as funny as your peers do.

Guidelines for your creating a positive virtual brand

We recommend Robinson students utilize the following guidelines to proactively manage your virtual brand on any social media site you actively utilize in order to advance your career. Investing the time necessary to develop, monitor, and enhance your virtual brand is a requirement for any professional who is actively or passively seeking employment.

Profiles – Think of your profile as your online business card. It is important for your profile to convey a professional message about you as a potential employee. We suggest you review and edit any information which does not meet this standard. After you complete this process, we encourage you to identify a professional you trust to review your information and provide you with feedback.

Friends – Keep in mind it is important to monitor the content on your friends’ pages who you are linked to. We suggest you review their profiles and any pictures they may post of you to determine if there is any inappropriate content you would like removed.

Privacy Settings – Facebook in particular has been known to change their privacy settings often. As a result, it is important for you to review these regularly to make sure only friends have access to view your profile. You also want to take a close look at the search, news feed, applications, photos, and video settings to determine how much information you want to share.

Monitor New Information – It is a good idea to use multiple search engines to find out what employers might be able to find if they search for your name. If you find anything which could be detrimental, you can look into having it removed.

Voicemail – Be sure the voicemail greeting on your phone is professional. Every form of communication sends a message to prospective employers.

LinkedIn – The focus of this site is professional networking, and they have strict rules about how to use the system in order to connect with people. Make sure you understand how to leverage this site in order to expand your network. In addition, many employers are now posting jobs based on your profile, so this could be a great tool if you are actively job seeking.

Twitter – This site was designed to be an open forum. Make sure you know who is “following” you and be sure you tailor the content of your “tweets” to the right audience.

Statistics

• Twitter has 328 million users
• Facebook has more than 2 billion users
• LinkedIn has over 500 million users in over 200 countries
• Instagram has over 700 million users
EVALUATING AND NEGOTIATING A JOB OFFER

STEP 1 – PREPARATION

✔ Before you can assess a job offer, you must make sure you have information about the market. Important information includes the following: salary averages for your field and in your geographic area of interest, average salaries that your peers received, norms in your field, such as where you can push in negotiation, and which things are non-negotiable, such as benefits or stock options. You can find this information in the Occupational Outlook Handbook, Web sites, Career Advancement Center, and through your professional network.

✔ Identify and rank your value issues. This will help you remember an offer is not just about salary, but about what you value in a position. The issues may include:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Responsibility</th>
<th>Flexibility</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Stability</td>
<td>Benefits</td>
<td>Prestige</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Independence</td>
<td>Supervisory Style</td>
<td>Public Contact</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mental Stimulation</td>
<td>Teamwork</td>
<td>Salary</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Personal Growth</td>
<td>Recognition</td>
<td>Making Decisions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Low Stress Level</td>
<td>Variety</td>
<td>Helping Others</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Challenge</td>
<td>Competition</td>
<td>Physical Work Environment</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

STEP 2 – KNOW THE EMPLOYER’S COMPENSATION GUIDELINES

✔ How does a job offer process develop? Although there are many ways to deliver an offer, they are typically presented from one of three different viewpoints:

- Fixed Offer: You can negotiate all you want, but it won't do you any good. They operate on a take-it or leave-it basis, so you may not want to waste your time negotiating.

- Pay-Grade System: This is a system in which a salary range has been set and you will be paid within this range based on your experience and the duties associated with the job. You may be able to negotiate within the salary range. The pay-grade system is the most common compensation system encountered.

- The Negotiator: This type of system is rare because most organizations work within a structure. In this framework, the employer will have the authority to raise or lower your salary without going through bureaucratic red tape.

STEP 3 – SALARY AND BENEFIT NEGOTIATION

✔ If an employer makes an offer that is below your expectation, clarify what the benefits are. If the offer still isn’t competitive, try one of these approaches:

Approach 1: I’m very interested in the role, but I would like to discuss the salary you’re offering.

Approach 2: I really want this position, but I was a little disappointed the offer was lower than I expected.

✔ When using either approach, be certain to support your case by stating your skills, the average salary range for your level of experience in your field, and the average salaries for GSU graduates in your field. Let the employer respond, and then continue the discussion from their lead.

✔ Based on an employer’s compensation guidelines, you may not be able to negotiate a higher salary. However, you may be able to increase your compensation via benefits. Negotiable areas often include: vacation time (it’s often increased for more senior employees), educational reimbursement, flex time, and salary review (you might negotiate a salary review after three months rather than six months or a year). Remember, you may be negotiating with the person who will be your supervisor. Stay polite. Try to make it a win-win situation.
STEP 4 – ASSESSING THE JOB OFFER

✓ Consider the pros and the cons of the offer. It may help to create a chart. A chart may also be helpful if you have had more than one offer, and you want to compare and contrast the merits of each offer.

STEP 5 – GET IT IN WRITING!

✓ It would be nice if everything discussed would actually occur, but unfortunately it doesn’t always happen that way. To avoid problems in the future, ask for a letter of employment which states all the employment conditions agreed upon, (i.e. salary and benefits as well as a thorough job description). This way, if there is confusion at a later date, you will have a written document to refer to stating the conditions under which you were hired. This document is especially important if the conditions of your employment differ from normal company policies.

A FINAL WORD

✓ Keep in mind that if you decide to negotiate, your job offer will not be rescinded by the employer, even if he/she decides not to negotiate. Also, if a position is acceptable to you as it is offered, you should not feel like you must negotiate.
JOB ACCEPTANCE LETTER

Even if you have accepted a job over the phone, it's a good idea to write a job acceptance letter to confirm the details of employment and to formally accept the job offer.

Your letter can be brief, but, should include the following:

- Thank you and appreciation for the opportunity
- Written acceptance of the job offer
- The terms and conditions of employment (salary, benefits)
- Starting date of employment

Address the letter to the person who offered you the position. Include your contact information and phone number, even though it is on file with the employer.

Make sure that your letter is well written and does not contain typos or grammatical errors. Even though you already have been offered the job, you want to make sure all your correspondence is professional.

Date

Dear Mr. Barnes,

As we discussed on the phone, I am very pleased to accept the position of Marketing Manager with Smithfield Pottery. Thank you for the opportunity. I am eager to make a positive contribution to the company and to work with everyone on the Smithfield team.

As we discussed, my starting salary will be $35,000, and health and life insurance benefits will be provided after 90 days of employment.

I look forward to starting employment on July 1, 2008. If there is any additional information or paperwork you need prior to then, please let me know.

Again, thank you.

JOB REJECTION LETTER

When you have decided to reject a job offer, you may want to let the employer know in writing that you are declining the offer. Your letter should be polite, brief, and to the point. You don’t want to burn bridges, and this employer may have a better offer for you down the road. So, don’t get into any specifics. Even if the hours are awful, the work environment is terrible, or the pay isn't enough to make ends meet, don’t mention it.

You should include the following:

- Thank you and appreciation for the offer
- Written rejection of the job offer
- Address the letter to the person who offered you the position. Include your contact information and phone number, even though it is on file with the employer.

Make sure that your letter is well-written and does not contain typos or grammatical errors.

Even though you are declining the job, you want to make sure all your correspondence is professional.

Dear Mr. Jones,

Thank you very much for offering me the position of Marketing Manager with Smithfield Pottery. It was a difficult decision to make, but I have accepted a position with another company.

I sincerely appreciate you taking the time to interview me and to share information on the opportunity and your company.

Again, thank you for your consideration.

ONGOING CAREER ADVANCEMENT

THE CAREER ADVANCEMENT CYCLE

It takes a lifetime of choices to build a career – and it takes self-awareness, focus, and discipline to make the choices that lead to a fulfilling career.

In all likelihood, the job you have today is the result of not just one choice, but many cumulative and intersecting choices that all have a bearing on your career path – where you live, where you’ve gone to school, what courses you’ve taken, and who you’ve met along the way.

The wisdom of those choices depends in large part on how well you understand yourself within the following dimensions:

- Values
- Interests
- Skills
- Experience

Ongoing career advancement involves clarifying your values, pursuing your interests, building your skills, and expanding your base of experience – all against the backdrop of the network of relationships that you build and within the context of the career plan that you develop.

From time to time, it’s valuable to examine where you are in your career, and where you’d like to go. In this way, you create a conscious cycle of career management that is driven not by external circumstances but by your internal compass of values, interests, skills and experience.

The Mission Statement exercise on the following page is adapted from Stephen Covey’s book The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People, and is designed to help you clarify your values.

The Career Action Plan which follows will help you outline next steps in your career advancement process. Both of these exercises will be valuable to you, wherever you are on your career path. If you take some time periodically to envision where you want to go in your career and the qualities you want to embody along the way, you’ll reap the benefits.
YOUR PERSONAL MISSION STATEMENT

A personal mission statement is a bit different from a company mission statement, but the fundamental principles are the same. Writing a personal mission statement offers the opportunity to establish what’s important and perhaps make a decision to stick to it before we even start a career… or it enables us to chart a new course when we’re at a career crossroads. Stephen Covey (in First Things First) refers to developing a mission statement as, “connecting with your own unique purpose and the profound satisfaction that comes from fulfilling it.”

A personal mission statement helps job-seekers identify their core values and beliefs. Michael Goodman (in The Potato Chip Difference: How to Apply Leading Edge Marketing Strategies to Landing the Job You Want) states that a personal mission statement is “an articulation of what you’re all about and what success looks like to you.” A personal mission statement also allows job-seekers to identify companies that have similar values and beliefs and helps them better assess the costs and benefits of any new career opportunity.

The biggest problem most job-seekers face is not in wanting to have a personal mission statement, but actually writing it. So, to help you get started on your personal mission statement, here is a five-step mission-building process. Take as much time on each step as you need -- and remember to dig deeply to develop a mission statement that is both authentic and honest. And to help you better see the process, we’ve included an example of one job-seeker’s process in developing her mission statement.

Toward A Personal Mission Statement

Step 1: Identify Past Successes. Spend some time identifying four or five examples where you have had personal success in recent years. These successes could be at work, in your community, at home, etc. Write them down. Try to identify whether there is a common theme -- or themes -- to these examples. Write them down.

Step 2: Identify Core Values. Develop a list of attributes that you believe identify who you are and what your priorities are. The list can be as long as you need. Once your list is complete, see if you can narrow your values to five or six most important values. Finally, see if you can choose the one value that is most important to you.

Step 3: Identify Contributions. Make a list of the ways you could make a difference. In an ideal situation, how could you contribute best to the world in general; your family; your employer or future employers; your friends; your community?

Step 4: Identify Goals. Spend some time thinking about your priorities in life and the goals you have for yourself. Make a list of your personal goals, perhaps in the short-term (up to three years) and the long-term (beyond three years).

Step 5: Write Mission Statement. Based on the first four steps and a better understanding of yourself, begin writing your personal mission statement.

Sample Mission Statement: To live life completely, honestly, and compassionately, with a healthy dose of realism mixed with the imagination and vision that all things are possible if we orient ourselves toward the answer.

ACING THE INTERVIEW

Objectives

1. To help you find the information you need to know in order to decide whether or not you want to work there.

2. To help the employer find out the information he or she needs to know in order to decide whether or not they want to hire you.

Overview of Interview Process

Before the Interview

• Research the position for which you will be interviewing
• Research the organization/employer thoroughly
• Obtain interviewer(s) name and title
• Confirm the time/date/location of the interview
• Identify your skills that relate to the job; review your resume and be able to elaborate on it
• Review frequently asked questions, practice interviewing and request feedback from others for improving your interviewing skills; do a mock interview!
• Prepare questions to ask the interviewer
• Know the general salary range for the position
• Dress for success!

During the Interview

• Arrive early and bring extra copies of your resume
• Relax; be yourself; be positive
• Follow the lead of the interviewer (Don’t try to take over the interview)
• Listen closely to the interviewer’s questions; ask for clarification, if needed
• Be concise in your answers; give concrete answers to back up your claims
• Never slight a former employee or colleague
• Be aware of your posture and body language; watch your grammar
• Be sure to clarify any follow-up arrangements

After the Interview

• Write a thank-you letter to the interviewer(s) within 24 hours after the interview.
• You can send it via e-mail or regular mail. Use your best judgment, or ask the Career Advancement Center for advice if you are unsure of which method to choose. At a minimum, the letter should thank the interviewer for their time and consideration. However, it may also include additional information or reiterate your interest in the company/position.
• Evaluate your performance by asking yourself questions such as:
  “How well did I present my qualifications? Did I use clear, concrete examples?
  What points did I make that seemed to interest the interviewer? How can I improve my next interview?”
• If the employer has not contacted you within the time frame stated, follow up via phone to find out the status of your application.
• Follow-up may be necessary even after the thank you letter. If you have not heard from the interviewer/employer in 5-10 business days, you may want to take the initiative to contact them and get a better idea of their timeline or process. Keep in mind that you don’t want to be pushy or come across as a pest. Once again, use your best judgment or come to the Career Advancement Center for advice when deciding when to follow-up and what method is most appropriate (phone, e-mail, or letter).
CONDUCTING INFORMATIONAL INTERVIEWS

Richard Bolles, the author of the best-selling career guide of all time, What Color Is Your Parachute? is credited with advocating this process as a way of "trying on jobs to see if they fit you."

Informational Interviewing IS an opportunity to
• Explore potential career paths
• Speak with an expert and develop a network
• Gain insight into the hidden job market (unadvertised employment opportunities)
• Recognize your strengths and weaknesses
• Build your confidence

SETTING UP AN INFORMATIONAL INTERVIEW

Some people abuse informational interviewing by using them as a way to get a job rather than for collecting information. It is important to be honest in your first meeting with potential colleagues. You may be surprised by how graciously most people will treat you. For your part, you must be thoroughly prepared to respect their time and trust.

1. Identify a professional to contact in a career field of interest to you.
   Once you know which fields you want to explore, ask yourself: “Do I know anyone who works in this field?” OR “Does anyone I know (roommate, friends, fellow students, professors, family members, neighbors, co-workers, managers) have contacts in this field? The CAC can help you as well!

2. Do background homework before contacting the employer.
   Identify why you are contacting this person and what kind of information this person can provide to you. Research the person’s career field and organization, and compile a list of 15 questions to ask during the interview.

3. Contact the professional via phone (or in writing if done well in advance).
   Speak directly to the person, or explain to an assistant why you would like to speak with this person; ask for best procedure to contact him/her. Have a written telephone “script” ready (refer to the example in this section) to describe the purpose of the meeting you are requesting. Identify a convenient time for you to meet with this person at his/her work site.

4. Prepare for the day of the informational interview.
   • Call to confirm the appointment, get directions parking information well before the interview.
   • Thoroughly research the company of the person you are interviewing.
   • Select an appropriate outfit to wear to the interview.
   • Put together a portfolio with paper, pens and copies of an updated resume to take with you.
   • Be sure to bring your 15 questions

5. During the actual interview...
   • Arrive five minutes early and announce your presence to the assistant.
   • Be courteous to everyone that you meet, especially assistant.
   • Don’t come too early since if the person was trying to finish some work before your “on-time” arrival, they may feel on the spot to begin early without detaching from the project.
   • When you meet the person you’ll be interviewing, shake hands and introduce yourself, and immediately express gratitude for their willingness to meet.
   • Ask if you can take notes, and then do so without distracting the speaker or allowing yourself to miss anything.
   • Be sure to ask for referrals to other appropriate individuals in the field or in related organizations.
   • Also, ask if you can use this person’s name in your introduction.
   • Be conscious of time and do not spend more than 30 minutes unless the professional initiates extra time.
   • At the end of the interview, thank the person for his/her time and shake hands as you leave.

6. Immediately after the interview...
   • Find a quiet place to sit and write down all of the answers to the questions that you asked.
   • Jot down information about any follow-up activities you discussed or names of other professionals to contact.
   • Send a thank-you note and keep this individual posted on your progress.
   • Also, evaluate your style of interviewing. What could you have done better?
SAMPLE QUESTIONS FOR INFORMATIONAL INTERVIEWS

Remain aware of where the person goes with the interview. You may say something as simple as, “How did you get into this field, I mean what was your major in college,” and the person may answer nearly everything in your questions list. If so, it will not be impressive if you ask something they have just covered.

It is far better to say, “Do you mind if I check my questions list to see if we have covered everything?”, then allow for the silence while you glance at each rather than to feel rushed and ask something that was covered or that has become irrelevant. It will seem like it takes far longer to you to look at glance at all of the questions than it will to the other, and it gives evidence of your poise and professionalism.)

1. How did you get started in this field? What is your educational background? What are your major responsibilities?
2. What is the most rewarding aspect of your job, least rewarding? What might you change? Would you choose this career again?
3. What is a “typical” day like for you?
4. What obligations does your work put on you outside of the actual job? What are some lifestyle considerations for this career field?
5. What are some common entry-level positions in the field of?
6. What kind of salary range and benefits could an entry-level position expect to receive?
7. What kind of an individual (skills and personality) would be best suited for these entry-level positions? What are the most important factors used when hiring?
8. What is the best educational preparation for a career in this field? Which classes and experiences would be most helpful to obtain while in college?
9. What have you found to be a major weakness of new hires in this field?
10. How high is the turnover? How does one move from position to position or other areas of the organizations? What are typical policies about promotions from within? How are employees evaluated?
11. What is the typical career path from entry-level to top management?
12. How do people usually find out about full-time openings in this field?
13. What is the future outlook for this career field? What are the areas of potential growth and decline? How do you see jobs changing in the future?
14. Which professional journals and organizations would be most helpful in evaluating the field?
15. Can you recommend other types of organizations in this field that I might investigate or contact? Can you recommend any specific person for me to talk with and may I have permission to use your name.

TELEPHONE SCRIPT IDEAS

1. Provide a brief introduction of yourself for the professional. State that you are a student who is seeking advice and information on this person’s career or industry.
2. State how you found out about this person.
3. Identify what you hope to get out of a meeting with this person (information on the person’s current job? information on person’s career? information on general career field?)
4. Once you’ve set an interview date, verify the address, location, date, and time before you hang up.

Sample Script
Hello, my name is__________________. I was given your name (or found your name) by______________.

I’m a (class year) at the Robinson College of Business and am interested in speaking with you about… I’m interested in learning more about the field of________________________(or your position as____________________).

Is this a good time for me to try to set up a meeting with you or someone on your staff? (If not), when would be a good time for me to try to call you back?

I would like to meet with you for about a half hour at your convenience. Can you suggest a convenient time, or would you be available to speak to me (during the week of______)?
BEHAVIORAL INTERVIEWING

The behavioral interview is designed to minimize personal impressions that can affect the hiring decision. By focusing on the applicant's actions and behaviors, rather than subjective impressions that can sometimes be misleading, interviewers can make more accurate hiring decisions.

"Tell me about a time when you were on a team and one of the members wasn't carrying his or her weight." If this is one of the leading questions in your job interview, you could be in for a behavioral interview. Based on the premise that the best way to predict future behavior is to determine past behavior, this style of interviewing is gaining wide acceptance among recruiters.

Today, more than ever, every hiring decision is critical. Behavioral interviewing is designed to minimize personal impressions that can affect the hiring decision. By focusing on the applicant's actions and behaviors, rather than subjective impressions that can sometimes be misleading, interviewers can make more accurate hiring decisions.

James F. Reder, manager of staff planning and college relations for Occidental Chemical Corporation in Dallas, says, "Although we have not conducted any formal studies to determine whether retention or success on the job here has been affected, I feel our move to behavioral interviewing has been successful. It helps concentrate recruiters' questions on areas important to our candidates' success within Occidental." The company introduced behavioral interviewing in 1986 at several sites and has since implemented it company-wide.

Behavioral vs. Traditional Interviews

Traditional and behavioral interviews differ in several ways. If you have training or experience with traditional interviewing techniques, you may find the behavioral interview quite different in several ways:

- Instead of asking how you would behave in a particular situation, the interviewer will ask you to describe how you did behave in a real-life situation and will not allow you to theorize or generalize about several events.
- Expect the interviewer to question and probe with questions like, "How did you feel?", "What was your role?", and "What was the result?".
- The interviewer will ask you to provide details. Be specific. Give a detailed accounting of one event.
- The interview will be a more structured process that will concentrate on areas that are important to the interviewer, rather than allowing you to concentrate on areas that you may feel are important.
- You may not get a chance to deliver any prepared stories.
- Most interviewers will be taking copious notes throughout the interview.

The behavioral interviewer has been trained to objectively collect and evaluate information and works from a profile of desired behaviors that are needed for success on the job. Because the behaviors a candidate has demonstrated in previously similar positions are likely to be repeated, you will be asked to share situations in which you may or may not have exhibited these behaviors. Your answers will be tested for accuracy and consistency.

Preparing for a Behavioral Interview

Instead of feeling anxious or threatened by the prospect of a behavioral interview, just keep in mind how the traditional interview and the behavioral interview differ: The traditional interviewer may allow you to theorize about hypothetical situations, but the behavioral interviewer is looking at past actions only. Regardless, it will be important to put your best foot forward and make a good impression on the interviewer with appropriate attire, good grooming, a firm handshake, and direct eye contact. There is no substitute for promptness, courtesy, preparation, enthusiasm, and a positive attitude.

- Recall recent situations that show favorable behaviors or actions, especially involving course work, work experience, leadership, teamwork, initiative, planning, and customer service.
- Prepare short descriptions of each situation; be ready to give details if asked.
- Be sure each story you tell has a beginning, middle, and end.
- Be sure the outcome or result reflects positively on you (even if the result itself was not favorable).
- Be honest. The interviewer will find out if your story is built on a weak foundation.
LEARN TO USE THE STAR INTERVIEW TECHNIQUE

The STAR technique will help you learn how to describe the situation, your task in it, your action, and the result or outcome – just by remembering the acronym STAR:

★ Situation – Recently, I was part of a group project in my Organizational Communications class. We had an assignment to design an effective public relations campaign for a fictitious company.

★ Task – We chose to market a bank opening a new office in a small community. We had to come up with a marketing plan and media kit designed to introduce the company to its new community and to solicit new bank customers.

★ Action – As the project team leader, I set up an appointment with the Director of Marketing at XYZ Bank and got her insight on the project. After the meeting, I came up with a creative marketing plan, which was enthusiastically received by the other group members. I then assigned each group member a particular task, based on his or her area of expertise. For example, one member of our group was responsible for designing the bank’s logo and another member was responsible for writing a press release. I monitored the group’s progress to make sure we were meeting our deadlines and also put together a strong oral presentation to make to the class.

★ Result – The project was lots of fun and allowed me to develop the management skills necessary to lead a very diverse group of 6 people. The most rewarding part was that our group received the highest marks in the class and the professor currently uses our project materials as an example to his classes.

Sample STAR Technique Response

A possible response for the question, "Tell me about a time when you were on a team and a member wasn’t pulling his or her weight?" might go as follows:

"I had been assigned to a team to build a canoe out of concrete. One of our team members wasn’t showing up for our lab sessions or doing his assignments. I finally met with him in private, explained the frustration of the rest of the team, and asked if there was anything I could do to help. He told me he was preoccupied with another class that he wasn’t passing, so I found someone to help him with the other course. He not only was able to spend more time on our project, but he was also grateful to me for helping him out. We finished our project on time and got a 'B' on it."

The interviewer might then probe: "How did you feel when you confronted this person?" "Exactly what was the nature of the project?" "What was his responsibility as a team member?" "What was your role?" "At what point did you take it upon yourself to confront him?" You can see it is important that you not make up or "shade" information, and why you should have a clear memory of the entire incident."
SAMPLE BEHAVIORAL QUESTIONS

1. Give a specific example of when you had to gain the cooperation of others and what challenges you faced. What was the outcome? What was the long-term impact on your ability to work with this group?

2. Tell me about a course, work experience, or extracurricular activity where you had to work closely with others. How did it go? How did you overcome any difficulties?

3. Give me a specific example of a time when you had to address an angry customer. What was the problem, and what was the outcome? How would you assess your role in defusing the situation?

4. Tell me about a suggestion you made to improve job processes/operations. What was the result?

5. Describe the most significant or creative presentation/idea that you developed/implemented.

6. Tell me about a time when you took a risk in creating a new process or program? What was the situation and what did you do?

7. By providing examples, demonstrate that you can adapt to a wide variety of people, situations, and/or environments.

8. Tell me about a decision you made while under a lot of pressure.

9. Talk about a time when there was a decision to be made and procedures were not in place? What was the outcome?

10. What are 3 effective leadership qualities you think are important? How have you demonstrated these qualities in your past/current position?

11. Describe a situation in which you were able to use persuasion to successfully convince someone to approach things your way. What level was the person you had to persuade?

12. What have you done in your present/previous job that goes beyond what was required?

13. Tell me about a time when you had to resolve a difference of opinion with a coworker/customer/supervisor. How do you feel you showed respect?

14. Describe the way you handled a specific problem involving others with differing values, ideas, and beliefs in your current/previous job.

15. Describe a work situation that required you to really listen and display compassion to a coworker/employee who was telling you about a personal/sensitive situation.

16. Can you recall a time when you gave feedback to a coworker who was unaccepting of others?

17. Can you recall a time when a person’s cultural background affected your approach to a work situation?

18. Tell me about a specific time when you had to handle a tough problem which challenged fairness or ethical issues.

19. Tell me about a tough decision you made. What steps, thought processes, and considerations did you take to make an objective decision?

20. If you can, tell me about a time when your trustworthiness was challenged. How did you react/respond?
CASE INTERVIEWING

In a case interview, you are introduced to a business dilemma facing a particular company. You have to analyze the situation, identify key business issues, and discuss how you would address the problems.

- Practice extensively before a case interview. Use the books and Web sites listed at the end of this section. Start out with some practice explaining a process you know well, like how to change a tire or how to bake a cake. Advance to assessing a business situation for friends or family members, such as which investment vehicle they should choose for an inheritance. Practice speaking clearly and cleanly, summarizing processes in a minute or less.
- Listen carefully to the question. Paraphrase it back to the interviewer to ensure your understanding. You may also want to take notes, possibly on a pad of graph paper in case you want to create a graph as part of your conclusion.
- Use silence wisely to ask the interviewer if it is okay to take a moment to ponder the case, and then take a few moments to collect your thoughts.
- Make your process transparent and "think out loud" as you are working through the case. Remember that rarely is there one "right" answer for analyzing a case. However, be careful not to forget key facts, defend impossible ideas, or force the wrong structure onto a problem.
- Don’t be afraid to ask questions. The case interview is meant to be interactive, with lots of back and forth between you and the interviewer. Questions are expected, especially because the information provided about the case will likely be incomplete.
- Construct a logical framework with which to explore the critical issues of the case. Many of the principles you learned in business school can serve as a framework. Examples include Porter’s Five Forces, the SWOT analysis, Value Chain Analysis, and the Four P’s of marketing. Make sure your conclusion is grounded in action, not just theory. Be able to explain/defend your reasoning.
- Prioritize the issues and objectives and pay attention to what is important. You don’t have time for every aspect of the case. As you ask questions, you should be able to pick up clues as to which issues are key.
- Think outside the box, creativity and brainstorming may be just what the interviewer is looking for.

NETWORKING

Numerous studies have proven more than 70% of all jobs are landed through networking. Begin networking as soon as you determine which career field you will pursue. Networking is a valuable skill that enables you to make contacts, gain information about career options, and meet professionals in your career field.

You want to be able to quickly and concisely communicate to the networking contact your purpose…to set up an informational interview or to develop specific job leads. You will need a brief self-introduction that tells about your background, experience, and what direction you are headed. Think about your education, interests, skills, values, and what industries, locations, and types of jobs interest you. It is a good idea to write out this introduction and practice it before calling a contact.

NETWORKING – 3-Step Process:

Step 1: Starting to build your network

Begin by developing a list of your existing and potential network using the following pool of contacts:

- Family, friends, and neighbors.
- Friends and co-workers of your parents or other relatives.
- Supervisors and acquaintances from past and present jobs and internships.
- School faculty and administrators.
- Contacts through church or other religious organizations, hobbies, athletic participation, community involvement.
- People you have met at on-campus information sessions or other presentations.
- Members of professional organizations relevant to your field or area of career interest.
- Contacts through public service and volunteer work.
- Other professionals including doctors, dentist, accountant, lawyer, banker, and insurance agent.

Step 2: Scheduling and conducting informational interviews

Informational interviews are crucial and often overlooked aspect of networking. They are the best way to find out about a job and make a contact. The most important steps in the process are the following:

- Call, write, or email the person you want to meet. Emphasize that you are not looking for a job, but researching an industry or position.
- Set up a meeting and have 15-20 questions prepared.
- Before the meeting, it is imperative that you research the business in which you are interested.
- Don't waste your contact's time.
- Set a time limit of about 30 minutes.
- For sample questions to ask, refer to the Informational Interviewing section of this guide.
Step 3: Activating and maintaining your network!

Person-to-Person
- Usually happens in the early stages of the networking process.
- Start by talking to people you know really well.
- These initial contacts will lead to meetings with secondary contacts.

Social Media Networking
- Update your LinkedIn profile and connect with family, friends, classmates, and faculty. Personalize the connection message you send; do not send the pre-populated standard message.

Written Letters
- Usually happens in the middle stages of the networking process.
- Can be used when you have been referred to someone you do not know.
- May also be used when contacting someone without the benefit of an acquaintance’s referral.
- The following guidelines can be followed:
  - Opening Paragraph – State why you are writing and identify yourself. Always lead with the name of the person who referred you. For example, "Mark Davis suggested that I write to you about my interest in working for a nonprofit agency. Currently, I am a junior psychology major at Georgia State University and I am seeking information about careers in the nonprofit sector."
  - Middle Paragraph – Provide information about your background and your career interests, no matter how tentative. For example, what work experience have you had and what are your goals? Remember, the purpose of networking is to gather information, not to ask for a job. Therefore, make sure to state that you are in the process of gathering information about career possibilities. Also, ask about arranging a face-to-face meeting or a conversation by telephone or e-mail at the contact’s convenience.
  - Last Paragraph – Thank your networking contact for their time and consideration. Do not ask them to call you. Instead, offer to call them after they have had an opportunity to review your letter, usually within one week, to schedule a convenient time for follow up.

Telephone Calls
- Have a script of your ‘sound bite’ readily available.
- Clearly identify yourself, the reason why you are calling, and give the name of your referral.
- Suggest a follow-up conversation by phone, face-to-face, or by e-mail.
- Close by thanking them for their time.

Email
- Use this if you are familiar with the contact and know their organization’s culture is email friendly.
- Send a message that is professional and uses correct grammar and free of grammatical errors.
- Follow the guidelines for letter writing outlined above.

Tracking your Networking Activities
- Keep a notebook or a paper log of your activities to keep you organized and on track
- Better yet, purchase a contact management system for your home PC
- Another option is to enter this information into a contact management system or spreadsheet for quick retrieval

How do I keep my network alive long term?
- Don’t limit your thank-you letters to those contacts with whom you met face-to-face
- Acknowledge the assistance of everyone who was instrumental in your network
- Your consideration will reinforce the positive impressions made during your contact and present you as an organized person who pays attention to detail
BUSINESS ETIQUETTE

The Basics
Courtesy and thoughtfulness is key, regardless of the situation. Consider other people’s feelings, and stick to your convictions as diplomatically as possible. Address conflict as situation-related, rather than person-related. Apologize when you offend others. Avoid raising your voice, using harsh or derogatory language toward anyone (present or absent), or interrupting. You may not get as much "airtime" in meetings at first, but what you do say will be much more effective because it carries the weight of credibility and respectability. Your goal is to build resilient, flexible and productive relationships with everyone you encounter in the full range of business settings.

Relationships: It's About People
When you go about the business of relationship-building, don't differentiate by position or standing within the company, since everyone has tremendous power to help or hinder your career. Next time you need a document prepared or a conference room arranged, watch how many people are involved with that process and make it a point to meet them and show your appreciation.

Keep notes on people, whether on the back of their business cards or in a contact management database. Remember what you can about people and be thoughtful. Send cards or letters for birthdays or congratulations on promotions. Send flowers for engagements, weddings or in condolence for a death. People remember simple kindness.

While social rank, or class is a cornerstone of social interaction in many cultures, people tend to feel uneasy until they've seen an organizational chart and figured out the politics of the workplace. Remember, impressing the boss isn't enough.

The current social and economic climate is one of rapid advancement through technology, which makes relationships fluid, with less predictable courses than in the past. Mergers and acquisitions add to this "class mixing," causing a former competitor to become a coworker overnight. This can make things awkward if you treat people differently depending on their "corporate standing." If you show respect and courtesy to everyone, regardless of position or company, you avoid discomfort or damaging your chances in any unexpected turn of events.

Having a consistent demeanor improves your credibility. Even the people at the top will begin to suspect your motives if you treat VIPs with impeccable courtesy and snap at counter clerks.

The main thing you owe your boss above and beyond what you owe peers and subordinates is awareness about issues that may arise, and updates on outcomes and milestones. Never deliver surprises, and if you can’t speak well of him or her within and outside the company, you should consider changing jobs, because it won’t help your career to say negative things about the person or company for whom you work.

If you have a new employee, guest, or consultant working at your company for a day, week, or longer, be sure that this person has the resources he or she needs to do the job. This isn’t just courtesy, it’s good business: time spent inefficiently is awkward for the consultant and expensive for your company.
COMMUNICATION

Having the essential communication tools will help you excel to that next level. Follow the tips below to strengthen your communication skills.

Telephone
Always return calls, even if you don’t yet have an answer to the caller’s question. It is polite to provide an update or to redirect the person’s inquiry.

If you are going to be out of the office, have someone pick up your calls or be sure to leave instructions on your voicemail about how someone can reach you in an emergency. Also, be sure to check your voicemail frequently so that you don’t miss following up on important calls. Make sure your voice mail system is working properly and doesn’t tell the caller that the mailbox is full, transfer them to nowhere, or ring indefinitely. A faulty voicemail system is as unacceptable as a rude person.

When you initiate a call and get a receptionist or executive assistant, identify yourself and explain the nature of your call. That way, you will be sure you’re getting the right person or department and the person you are trying to reach will be able to pull up the appropriate information and help you more efficiently.

When you are on the receiving end of a phone call, identify yourself and your department. Answer the phone with some enthusiasm or at least warmth, even if you ARE being interrupted; the person on the other end doesn’t know that!

Email
- Make the subject line of your email message specific.
- Make messages succinct with all the critical or relevant information at the beginning of the message.
- Append a standard signature to your e-mails, including your address and phone number.

Interruptions
Avoid interruptions (of singular or group work sessions, meetings, phone calls, or even discussions), and if at all possible, always apologize if you must interrupt a conversation, meeting, or someone’s concentration on a task. Quickly state the nature of what you need, and show consideration for the fact that you are interrupting valuable work or progress.

Business Settings: Introductions
Before an event, use your address book or your "people database" to refresh your memory about the people you are likely to meet.

If you forget someone’s name, you can sometimes "cover" by introducing a person you do know first. "Do you know Joe Smith, one of our account reps?” which will usually get the unknown person to introduce him or herself. If this doesn’t work, an admission that you’ve had a mental block is acceptable, if you do it graciously without calling undue attention to yourself.
MEETINGS

Meetings are essential to collaboration, setting expectations, reviewing procedures, delegating work related tasks, and a plethora of other important business related activities. Specific business acumen is expected during a meeting and the below information will provide tips on how to conduct yourself during a meeting and within different business environments.

If a subject is important enough to call a meeting, be considerate of the participants’ time and ensure that it is well prepared. Communicate beforehand regarding:

- The objective
- The expected duration (respect the ending time, unless everyone agrees to continue)
- Items to be discussed

Thank meeting members for their time and participation, and demonstrate how their contributions helped meet the objective of the meeting. Participants are frequently left wondering if they have been heard or if their attendance and contributions were noticed. Distribute minutes or some written record (no matter how simple the meeting) to all attendees and absentees, with concise but complete descriptions of decisions made action items. Never assign an action item to a person who is not present, unless you must. Note in the minutes that the person hasn’t been notified, and will be contacted for a final disposition of the item.

Social Settings

Many impressions formed during a party, dinner or golf game can make or break a key business arrangement, whether or not business is discussed directly. Always carry business cards. Arrive at a party at the stated time, or if the event is unstructured, up to 30 minutes later.

Table Manners

These apply to the Americas and most of Europe. If you are elsewhere, do some research in advance.

The fork goes on the left. The spoon and knife go on the right. Food items go on the left, so your bread plate is on your left. Drinks, including coffee cups, should be on the right. When sitting at a banquet table, you may begin eating when two people to your left and right are served. If you haven’t been served, but most of your table has, encourage others to start. Reach only for items in front of you and ask that other items be passed by a neighbor. Offer to the left; pass to the right, although once things start being passed, go with the flow.

International Business

It is important to note that etiquette in other cultures requires a bit of adaptation and flexibility. If you are traveling on business to a foreign destination, or have visitors here, it is a good idea to learn as much as you can about the culture they are coming from and make appropriate allowances.

Items to consider:

- Language (make an effort to learn basic phrases)
- Time zones and working schedules
- Holidays
- Food customs (table manners, use of implements, etc.)

Generally speaking, as long as you are trying to be considerate and express an interest in learning, you should be fine. If in doubt, err on the conservative, formal side.
