Undergraduate Student Career Guide 2017-2018

Georgia State University
J. Mack Robinson College of Business
CAREER ADVANCEMENT CENTER
Welcome from Robinson’s Career Advancement Center

Congratulations!
The commitment you’ve made to pursue an undergraduate degree at Robinson is a significant investment in your future!

The Robinson Career Advancement Center (CAC) is dedicated to helping you maximize your investment by facilitating your professional and career development. Whether your goal is to move into the job market for the first time, advance within your current organization, move from one industry to another, or change careers completely, we have the resources to help you get there.

Robinson's Undergraduate Student Career Guide provides an overview of the resources available through the CAC. From career assessments to resume templates, cover letter examples to interview prep questions. Your career counselor will help you manage your career during your Robinson experience and beyond. Our staff has over 100 years of combined experience in career services, talent acquisition, career mobility, executive search, and human capital. We are dedicated to helping you maximize your career progression.

I strongly recommend you make time to meet your Career Counselor and become familiar with the CAC early in your program. We find students who regularly utilize our resources are significantly more successful in the job and internship search process. Students who make the most of their Robinson experience also join student organizations, get to know faculty members individually, attend guest speaking events, and build their networks — and we encourage you to do the same.

Where should you start?

Handshake is the career network for the future! Visit the Handshake homepage at https://gsu.joinhandshake.com/login to login to your 24/7 career advancement portal. Handshake is the place where you can schedule individual appointments with your career counselor, post your resume for campus interviews, RSVP to attend upcoming events, apply for jobs and internships, and access password protected online career support databases available to students.

Handshake is not just another job board. It is THE place employers and alumni go to actively source Robinson students and alumni for jobs and internships. HANDSHAKE helps you connect with employers and alumni seeking Robinson students for jobs and internships. If it’s posted in HANDSHAKE, employers are actively seeking Robinson talent!

Check out HANDSHAKE, which typically has 2000 jobs and internships posted and the CAC posts 300-500 new jobs and internships weekly. Review the CAC e-Newsletter for updated job and internship postings and current career events and resources. Last, but not least, be sure to join the Robinson Career Network on LinkedIn!

We look forward to helping you advance your career!

Sincerely,

Jason Aldrich, Ed.D.

The CAC is Moving to 55 Park Place!

The CAC is excited to announce that we will be moving to the Delta Student Success Center, a state of the art new facility located at 55 Park Place, 12th Floor at the end of November. Our new facility will include a Student Lab, Student meeting spaces and much more! Stay tuned for announcements in the CAC weekly e-Newsletter regarding upcoming career advancement, employer recruitment, and networking events in our new space.
CAC Student Policies

Professionalism
Students and alumni who participate in CAC events and utilize our services and resources are expected to behave with the highest degree of professionalism. This includes excellent business etiquette, high-quality communication, and representing yourself honestly in our systems and throughout your resume. The following policies have been developed in order to provide Robinson students and alumni with information on how to meet these expectations.

When do Career Advancement Center Services begin and end?
The CAC is committed to proactively helping Robinson College of Business students and alumni manage their career, develop excellent job search skills and connect with high-quality job opportunities.

Robinson College of Business students have access to CAC services beginning their first official day of class. Individuals needing career advice or services prior to their first day of class are encouraged to contact their undergraduate career center for guidance until they've begun classes at Robinson.

Who is ELIGIBLE to utilize services of the CAC? The following students are eligible beginning their first official day of class:

- Undergraduate business students with more than 42 credit hours who are currently enrolled in a degree program.
- Graduate students enrolled in a degree program.
- Students enrolled in graduate courses in a certificate program.
- Robinson alumni continue to have access to the CAC for up to 1 year after graduation.

*Degree programs include: BBA, Flex MBA, Professional MBA, Specialized Master's (MS), Executive MBA and certificate programs.

Who is NOT ELIGIBLE to utilize services of the CAC?

- Individuals who have applied to, or been accepted to, an RCB program but who have not started taking classes.
- Students in GSU colleges outside of the Robinson College of Business.
- Students studying as part of an Exchange program who are taking classes for two semesters or less can utilize the CAC's online resources and the HANDSHAKE database. However, students do not have access to career counselors.

Appointments with Robinson CAC Staff
Students and alumni meeting or communicating with our staff are expected to do so in a professional manner. In addition, we expect you to show up for scheduled phone or in-person appointments on time. If you need to reschedule, please do so at least 24 hours prior to the appointment by contacting our staff via email (using your GSU student email address).

HANDSHAKE Account Usage
Access to HANDSHAKE is provided exclusively to currently enrolled Robinson College of Business students and RCB alumni. Individual account holders are prohibited from sharing their access to the system with other individuals (GSU or external). Dishonestly changing your profile or resume in order to gain access to jobs, campus interviews or events is prohibited.

Violating this policy may result in losing access to Robinson CAC services and events including HANDSHAKE and interviewing privileges.

Interview and Information Session No-Show Policy
The CAC provides students with the opportunity to participate in on-campus recruiting events. Through this opportunity, students can apply for internships and full-time positions through Handshake.

As an integral part of the screening and selection process, students will have the opportunity to schedule on-campus interviews through Handshake. It is important that students maintain professional business communications throughout the interview process.

If you are unable to attend a campus interview for any reason (emergencies of any kind), you must cancel 48 hours prior to your interview via Handshake AND email Marielle Thomas, Career & Employer Relations Specialist at mthomas125@gsu.edu.

If you do not contact the CAC at least 48 hours prior to your interview, you will be considered a NO SHOW. Students who NO SHOW for an interview will be contacted by the CAC and required to submit a letter of apology to the employer. The CAC reserves the right to suspend your ability to participate in campus interviews for up to one full academic year.

Conduct with Employers
The CAC regularly hosts employers conducting interviews, holding information sessions or participating as guest speakers in a variety of events. Many of these events require students be invited to participate. It is not acceptable to attend events you are not invited to. For example, attempting to visit employers who are in the CAC conducting campus interviews for openings you have not been invited to interview for is prohibited.

In addition, once you arrive at an event, you are expected to stay for the duration. For example, it is not acceptable to leave in the middle of an information session if you determine the organization is not a good fit for your career goals.

Furthermore, attending events and repeatedly asking employers questions regarding why you were not selected for an interview or hired is unprofessional and may result in recruiters not returning to campus and permanently affecting future Robinson College of Business students seeking employment.

This type of behavior may result in losing access to Robinson CAC services and events including HANDSHAKE and interviewing privileges.

Communication via E-mail Notices
We use GSU e-mail addresses to notify current students about newly posted positions, upcoming deadlines or last minute changes to interview schedules. We will not send e-mails to an alternate address. It is YOUR responsibility to check your GSU e-mail account and/or manage the forwarding of e-mail sent to your GSU e-mail account.
Professional Development and Career Advancement - Roles and Responsibilities

The Robinson College of Business is committed to supporting our students’ professional development needs by providing outstanding curricular and co-curricular experiences. Our role is to employ great faculty and staff who pro-actively engage students in and out of the classroom with rigorous and relevant content, cutting edge resources, and individual support.

Robinson supports students’ career advancement by providing a wide range of professional development and co-curricular activities. Professional development opportunities include, but are not limited to, guest speakers, student organizations, boot camps, case student competitions, and professional association conferences. Career advancement opportunities include, but are not limited to, individual career coaching, job/internship postings, on-campus interviews, information sessions, panel discussions, workshops, career fairs, corporate site visits, and access to online resources.

As a Robinson College of Business student, we expect you to demonstrate professional behavior and assume responsibility for your actions. Professionalism is demonstrated by following the standards for professional behavior outlined below. By adhering to these standards, Robinson students will gain practical experience demonstrating the type of professional behavior with university employees and employers, which is expected in the workplace. In addition, we expect students to follow these guidelines and to serve as ambassadors of the college with alumni, employers and community members engaged in our professional development and career advancement activities. You are now part of the Robinson Family!

Your success strategy is simple. We provide you the tools to get yourself ready for the labor market, and you are responsible to take advantage of these opportunities for your own professional development and career advancement. You must pro-actively engage the professional development and career advancement activities we sponsor, take advantage of college resources to identify employment opportunities, and agree to individual coaching when we offer it to you. We are here to help, but you have to drive your own career!

Event Attendance
Professionalism begins with keeping commitments. Robinson students are expected to communicate with faculty, staff, and employers if/when they are unable to fulfill prior commitments. The Career Advancement Center and the Office of Graduate Recruitment and Student Services (GRSS) host a wide array of professional development opportunities, which include information sessions, workshops, and annual signature CAC events. Once registered for an event, students are expected to arrive on-time wearing proper business attire.

In the unfortunate event of an emergency and a student is unable to attend an event he/she has registered, the student should immediately contact his/her Career Coach to discuss the circumstances. We ask students to provide the CAC and/or event host with written notice for cancelation at least 24 hours or one full business day before the event.

First Occurrence: E-mail notification of failure to properly communicate absence
Second Occurrence: Email warning that admittance to future events are in jeopardy
Third Occurrence: Student will be encouraged to ask the host for permission to attend workshops

Coaching Appointments
Students are expected to arrive on time for scheduled appointments. Students who are unable to make an appointment should cancel at least 24 hours in advance by calling or emailing their designated Career Coach. A student arriving more than 10 minutes late for a scheduled appointment without contacting their Career Coach in advance will lose their appointment and will be asked to reschedule.

First Occurrence: E-mail notification of the failure to properly cancel or reschedule the appointment
Second Occurrence: Two week waiting period before rescheduling
Third Occurrence: Remediation conversation with career coach
Coaching Relationship
Each student is assigned a designated career coach upon entry to the program. Students are encouraged to work with their assigned career coach. Students who have an interest in reassignment are asked to make a formal request to their current coach and the coach they are interested in working with. Students should not seek assistance from more than one career coach.

First Occurrence: Notification email from assigned career coach
Second Occurrence: Remediation meeting
Third Occurrence: Loss of coaching privileges

Corporate Site Visits
The career coaches provide students with the opportunity to visit corporate offices in a number of industries. Corporate site visits offer students the chance to learn more about different companies in Atlanta and network with individuals from the firms. When students sign up for corporate site visits, it is a commitment to the company that said student will be in attendance. Should a student need to cancel, they should do so five business days before the scheduled office visit. No shows for corporate site visits will result in the following:

First Occurrence: Student should submit a letter of apology to the employer within 48 hours of the occurrence (reviewed by Career Coach)
Second Occurrence: Loss of eligibility for future corporate site visits

Student On-Campus Interviewing & Recruiting Policies
The CAC provides students with the opportunity to participate in on-campus recruiting events. Through this opportunity, students can apply for internships and full-time positions through Robinson Career Connection (RCC).

As an integral part of the screening and selection process, students will have the opportunity to schedule on-campus interviews through RCC. It is important that students maintain professional business communications throughout the interview process. If you are unable to attend an interview, you should cancel the interview by calling the CAC at (404) 413-7155 and/or by emailing Brent Winner at bwinner@gsu.edu.

In the unfortunate event of an emergency and a student is unable to attend the scheduled interview, students should communicate their emergency to the CAC at (404) 413-7155.

In the event of a no show, the student is asked to submit a letter of apology to the employer within 48 hours of the occurrence (reviewed by Career Coach).

Reporting Career Outcomes Data
The Robinson College of Business regularly collects career outcomes data from students. All Robinson students are expected to provide this data to the college in order to support our commitment to continuous improvement. The data we collect is reported in aggregate form and is utilized by the college to support accreditation, admissions, rankings, career advancement and departments.

Rescinding Offers
If a student has verbally committed to or formally signed documentation accepting an offer, all job/internship search activities should be discontinued. Once a student has accepted a position, it is a commitment to the employer. Should a student not honor that commitment, at a minimum it will result in a remediation meeting with the student’s assigned career coach. Additional actions may be warranted depending the circumstances of individual cases.
Getting Started

Three easy steps to access CAC resources
Whether you’re new to the Robinson College of Business or near graduation, the Career Advancement Center is here to help you launch your career! Make a commitment to your career success today with these three easy steps:

HANDSHAKE FAQ’s

What is HANDSHAKE? HANDSHAKE is our online career management system where all Georgia State University students and alumni can post resumes, search for jobs, internships, and submit resumes for campus interview opportunities 24-hours a day, 7-days a week.

Employers can request on campus interview dates, post jobs and internships, request information sessions, view schedules and register for events such as the CAREER EXPO.

How do I get started?

- To login to HANDSHAKE follow this link: https://gsu.joinhandshake.com/login

What is my HANDSHAKE login?

- Currently enrolled students can login to HANDSHAKE using their Campus ID and Password.

STEP 1 – Update Your Profile and Upload your Resume in HANDSHAKE

- Update your Profile and Upload your Resume – Your first step is to update your profile and upload your resume for review and approval by your CAC Career Counselor.

- Resume Samples – The Robinson Student Career Guide contains a variety of resume examples for students. In order to have your resume approved please follow the samples in this guide.

STEP 2 - Use HANDSHAKE to make an appointment with your Career Counselor

HANDSHAKE REGISTRATION – Students are REQUIRED to complete a Student Profile and upload their most current resume in HANDSHAKE before meeting with their Career Counselor.

- From your HANDSHAKE Dashboard, click on “Career Counseling” in the blue toolbar.
- This will yield all of the days/times that are available for your Counselor to meet with you.
- Select a day/time and click “Sign Up” to confirm.
- Please email your Counselor to arrange a meeting of the days/times listed conflict with your schedule.
- The first session will involve resume approval and a discussion about your career plans.

Meet with your Career Counselor

- Email – Do you have a simple request or question that is not of an urgent nature? Please send your Career Counselor an email with your needs. You should receive a response within 2-3 business days (e.g. You would like to have an initial review of your resume.)
- Phone call – Do you have a request that is not urgent but requires a timely answer? Please call your Career Counselor and leave a detailed message. Leave the name under which you’re enrolled and leave your phone number twice. (e.g. You receive an offer and need advice on assessing the offer.)
- Individual Appointments - Do you need in-depth 1-on-1 assistance with assessment, job search strategies, resumes, cover letters, or mock interview? If so, please go into HANDSHAKE and schedule an appointment with the Career Counselor who supports your concentration or program.

HANDSHAKE Questions? Please use the ‘Forgot Password’ feature. If issues persist, or you have other system questions, please email us at: robinsoncac@gsu.edu with “HANDSHAKE Access Request” in the subject line.

![Image of Appointments Page]
3. After pressing the button “Schedule a New Appointment”, click “J. Mack Robinson College of Business”. Then go through the process of choosing a Category, choosing a Type, and then choosing a Date/Time.

4. At this point, you can then add the Appointment Medium (Face to Face, Phone, or Skype), any notes that you find necessary to communicate to the coach, and a small survey about the appointment.
Signing Up For Career Events:

1. From the Dashboard, look to the left sidebar and under the “Events” section you should find an option stating “Events”. Select “Events”.

2. At this point, you will be on the Events page and you are able to see Events occurring both this month and in the future. Click any Event you’d like to join.

3. After pressing an Event, you will see all information about the event including Location, Time, Description, Etc. To register for the Event, press the “Join Event” button on the top right of the screen.
How can self-assessment help my job/internship search?

- In a job hunt, we’re so busy looking for the next opportunity that we often overlook the assessment phase of career management.
- Assessment gives us the opportunity to understand what motivates and inspires us, what engages our imaginations and gives us the energy to contribute to a work effort.
- Assessment helps us identify our interests and our skills in the context of possible career paths, and gives us the chance to align ourselves professionally with what we like and what we do well.
- There are many tools for measuring professional interests and skills; at the Robinson Career Advancement Center, we use an assessment tool called CareerLeader.

CAREERLEADER ASSESSMENT

CareerLeader is a fully integrated approach to business career self-assessment developed by Dr. Timothy Butler, Director of MBA Career Development Programs at the Harvard Business School, and Dr. James Waldroop, Dr. Butler’s associate at HBS for 18 years. This interactive, online program is currently being used by over 170 top business and MBA programs in the US and around the world to help guide their students.

CareerLeader will:

- Provide you with expert assessments of your unique pattern of business-relevant interests, values and abilities, using three tests we developed.
- Integrate your results, recommending specific career paths that are likely to be your best career path matches, and why you match well.
- Rate your entrepreneurial attributes.
- Provide you with in-depth views into 27 business career paths, including information about interests, rewards and abilities associated with each one. Many career paths also include an in-depth interview with an industry insider, for further insights.
- Help you to understand key elements of corporate culture and how you will fit in with each.
- Recognize and help you to cure your career "AchillesHeels".

How do I access CareerLeader?

- Send an e-mail to your career counselor with “CareerLeader Access Request” in the subject line. See our staff directory on page 2 for contact information.
ASSESSING YOUR CAREERLEADER RESULTS

CAREERLEADER
What are your reflections / observations on your CareerLeader results?

Are the results what you expected? Why? Why not? If the results were not what you expected, what did you anticipate?

CAREER PATH(S)
What career path(s) did CareerLeader suggest for you? Which of these paths would you like to explore further and why?

Prior to taking the CareerLeader assessment, what career path(s) did you decide on your own to pursue? Why?

In what ways does your career choice match your reward values, purpose & passion? (i.e., money, title, flexibility, work/life balance, etc.)

Is your goal realistic compared to your current background, experience, knowledge, etc.? If “yes”, give a brief explanation of the parallel of the “employer’s needs” and “your haves”.
What can I do with a Major in…?

The following information was developed utilizing data from our graduate outcomes survey to help students develop an understanding of the potential career paths available to Robinson students.

CONDUCTING INFORMATIONAL INTERVIEWS

Richard Bolles, the author of the best-selling career guide of all time, What Color Is Your Parachute?, is credited with advocating this process as a way of "trying on jobs to see if they fit you".

Informational Interviewing IS an opportunity to
- Explore potential career paths
- Speak with an expert and develop a network
- Gain insight into the hidden job market (unadvertised employment opportunities)
- Recognize your strengths and weaknesses
- Build your confidence

SETTING UP AN INFORMATIONAL INTERVIEW

Some people abuse informational interviewing by using them as a way to get a job rather than for collecting information. It is important to be honest in your first meeting with potential colleagues. You may be surprised by how graciously most people will treat you. For your part, you must be thoroughly prepared to respect their time and trust.

1. Identify a professional to contact in a career field of interest to you.
   Once you know which fields you want to explore, ask yourself: “Do I know anyone who works in this field?” OR “Does anyone I know (roommate, friends, fellow students, professors, family members, neighbors, co-workers, managers) have contacts in this field”? The CAC can help you as well!

2. Do background homework before contacting the employer.
   Identify why you are contacting this person and what kind of information this person can provide to you. Research the person’s career field and organization, and compile a list of 15 questions to ask during the interview.

3. Contact the professional via phone (or in writing if done well in advance).
   Speak directly to the person, or explain to an assistant why you would like to speak with this person; ask for best procedure to contact him/her. Have a written telephone “script” ready (refer to the example in this section) to describe the purpose of the meeting you are requesting. Identify a convenient time for you to meet with this person at his/her work site.

4. Prepare for the day of the informational interview.
   - Call to confirm the appointment, get directions parking information well before the interview.
   - Thoroughly research the company of the person you are interviewing.
   - Select an appropriate outfit to wear to the interview.
   - Put together a portfolio with paper, pens and copies of an updated resume to take with you.
   - Be sure to bring your 15 questions.

5. During the actual interview…
   - Arrive five minutes early and announce your presence to the assistant.
   - Be courteous to everyone that you meet, especially assistant.
   - Don’t come too early since if the person was trying to finish some work before your “on-time” arrival, they may feel on the spot to begin early without detaching from the project.
   - When you meet the person you’ll be interviewing, shake hands and introduce yourself, and immediately express gratitude for their willingness to meet.
   - Ask if you can take notes, and then do so without distracting the speaker or allowing yourself to miss anything.
   - Be sure to ask for referrals to other appropriate individuals in the field or in related organizations.
   - Also, ask if you can use this person’s name in your introduction.
   - Be conscious of time and do not spend more than 30 minutes unless the professional initiates extra time.
   - At the end of the interview, thank the person for his/her time and shake hands as you leave.

6. Immediately after the interview…
   - Find a quiet place to sit and write down all of the answers to the questions that you asked.
   - Jot down information about any follow-up activities that you discussed or names of other professionals to contact.
   - Send a thank-you note and keep this individual posted on your progress.
   - Also, evaluate your style of interviewing. What could you have done better?
SAMPLE QUESTIONS FOR INFORMATIONAL INTERVIEWS

Remain aware of where the person goes with the interview. You may say something as simple as, “How did you get into this field, I mean what was your major in college,” and the person may answer nearly everything in your questions list. If so, it will not be impressive if you ask something they have just covered.

It is far better to say, “Do you mind if I check my questions list to see if we have covered everything?”, then allow for the silence while you glance at each rather than to feel rushed and ask something that was covered or that has become irrelevant. It will seem like it takes far longer to you to look at glance at all of the questions than it will to the other, and it gives evidence of your poise and professionalism.

1. How did you get started in this field? What is your educational background? What are your major responsibilities?
2. What is the most rewarding aspect of your job, least rewarding? What might you change? Would you choose this career again?
3. What is a “typical” day like for you?
4. What obligations does your work put on you outside of the actual job? What are some lifestyle considerations for this career field?
5. What are some common entry-level positions in the field of _____?
6. What kind of salary range and benefits could an entry-level position expect to receive?
7. What kind of an individual (skills and personality) would be best suited for these entry-level positions? What are the most important factors used when hiring?
8. What is the best educational preparation for a career in this field? Which classes and experiences would be most helpful to obtain while still in college?
9. What have you found to be a major weakness of new hires in this field?
10. How high is the turnover? How does one move from position to position or other areas of the organizations? What are typical policies about promotions from within? How are employees evaluated?
11. What is the typical career path from entry-level to top management?
12. How do people usually find out about full-time openings in this field?
13. What is the future outlook for this career field? What are the areas of potential growth and decline? How do you see jobs changing in the future?
14. Which professional journals and organizations would be most helpful in evaluating the field?
15. Can you recommend other types of organizations in this field that I might investigate or contact? Can you recommend any specific person for me to talk with and may I have permission to use your name.

TELEPHONE SCRIPT IDEAS

1. Provide a brief introduction of yourself for the professional. State that you are a student who is seeking advice and information on this person’s career or industry.
2. State how you found out about this person.
3. Identify what you hope to get out of a meeting with this person (information on the person’s current job? information on the person’s entire career, or general career/industry?)
4. Once you’ve set an interview date, verify the address, location, date, and time before you hang up.

Sample Script

Hello, my name is_______________. I was given your name (or found your name) by_______________.

I’m a (class year) at the Robinson College of Business and am interested in speaking with you about…I’m interested in learning more about the field of_______________. (or your position as______________).

Is this a good time for me to try to set up a meeting with you or someone on your staff? (If not), when would be a good time for me to try to call you back?

I would like to meet with you for about a half hour at your convenience. Can you suggest a convenient time, or would you be available to speak to me (during the week of________________)?
Once you’ve identified your career interests and skills, you’re ready to move toward building a search strategy that will help you secure the next role in your career and build your base of experience.

FOCUS

- Ideal industry
- Ideal employers / companies within that industry
- Geography/are you willing to move, and if so, where?
- Ideal roles / functions within one of those companies

Your goal, through online research and informational interviews, will be to build both your general knowledge of your particular market segment and function and your specific knowledge regarding current job opportunities. This will enable you to apply for relevant roles as well as demonstrate your awareness of broader market dynamics as you move into interviews with potential employers.

FOLLOWING YOUR CAREER TIMELINE

As you approach taking the next career step, it is helpful to understand your direction, your speed, your timing and your ultimate destination to ensure that you are headed the right way. The Ongoing Career Advancement section of this handbook will help you determine your career mileposts at 5, 10, and 20 year intervals.

This section, however, is focused on the step you are taking today, as a strategic move in a broader plan for your career. The more awareness of your long-term goals that you bring to your current job search effort, the more likely you are to be happy with the job you choose.
ORGANIZING YOURSELF FOR SUCCESS

First things first: Your research will only be valuable to you if you have a way to keep track of your findings and refer to them as needed in your job search. (If you think you don’t need a spreadsheet to remember all the leads you’re pursuing, then you probably aren’t generating enough opportunities to secure your next career move.)

There are two organizational tools you can use: a filing system (either electronic or paper) and a spreadsheet. Use the filing system to capture information on:

- Industries and sub-sectors (e.g. a healthcare industry folder, with sub-sector folders on pharmaceuticals, medical devices, and hospitals).
- Companies of interest (information such as company profiles, executive bios, articles, financial results, market strategy).
- Functions and roles (e.g. finance & accounting function folder, with sub-sector folders on finance, accounting, controller roles).
- Current job opportunities (company information described above as well as job description and information provided to you by the potential employer).

Use the spreadsheet to capture networking contacts as well as current job opportunities and to track your contact with potential employers, as follows:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Priority</th>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Company</th>
<th>Role Available</th>
<th>Contact Name</th>
<th>Contact Title</th>
<th>Contact Info.</th>

Highlight high-priority opportunities so you don’t overlook them as the list grows, and commit to spending at least 15 minutes a day reviewing your progress and planning for next steps.

NOTE: If you run across jobs that are interesting but for which you aren’t qualified, make a note of possible professional development steps you can take on your Career Plan.

CONDUCTING EMPLOYER RESEARCH

Employer Research Framework
Employers expect you to take the time to research their organization and be prepared to ask thoughtful questions. In order to facilitate your preparation, we have developed this framework to help you synthesize information into an outline that will help you prepare for upcoming interviews.

Part I: Understanding the Organization

Financial Information: Organization structure, profit vs. non-profit, funding sources. What is total revenue? What are their sales trends? What part of this organization is growing?

Key Personnel: Who is the President, CEO? Key GSU Alumni? Any recent additions to senior management?

History/Mission/Goals: How old are they? What major events shape their history? Location of headquarters?

Products/Services: What new products or services are being developed? Who are the primary users of these products/services? In what sector of the market are they utilized?

Marketing Strategy: What key brand names do they own? What forms of advertising are used? Are there new initiatives? Where is their product/service sold, distributed, placed against the competition?

Key Clients: Who are they? What important service or product do they supply?

Major Competitors: Who are they? How do they compete? Do they have more market share?

Major Trends/Current Events in this Industry: What is the effect of government regulations? New competitors? Technology? Globalization? Latest news reports on the company or on the local or national news that affect the company?

Part II: Understanding the Position

Recruiting Profile/Company Culture: How do they describe themselves? How do they describe the type of person they are looking for? Who do they highlight in the brochure? Where do they recruit? Locations other than your community?

Position Description: Where does this position fit into this organization? What do they want the person in this position to contribute?

Part III: Pulling it all together

How do you fit their profile: What real life examples from your resume demonstrate how your background matches what they are seeking?

How can you help them achieve their goals: What are the key things they want? What are the key things you bring? Find a way to match these up and communicate it effectively.
Once you’ve clearly identified your target industry and market, along with some potential employers and available jobs, it’s time to start marketing yourself. Essentially, you need to prepare the following elements as you enter the job market in pursuit of specific opportunities:

- Cover letter
- Resume
- References
- Personal presentation
- Virtual Branding
- Interview
- Offer and salary negotiation

WRITING A STAND-OUT COVER LETTER

- A cover letter should always be sent with a resume, or follow-up correspondence. It should be read easily and have a conversational tone. Avoid using jargon or stiff wording. Be brief and to the point. A cover letter should not be more than one page in length.

- Follow the rules and layout options of a standard business letter. Use proper grammar and punctuation. Spelling errors are unacceptable! Hand sign your signature above the typed version.

- Whenever possible, address the cover letter to an individual instead of a department or organization. Never address it ‘To Whom It May Concern’. Be sure to spell the individual’s name correctly and obtain the correct title. If you need verification, call the organization.

- When e-mailing a resume, your cover letter serves as the e-mail, and your resume is the attachment.

- Each cover letter should be typed on quality paper. To obtain a professional look, use the same paper as your resume.

- When you are inquiring about a general interest area (you are not aware of specific openings), you may choose a “shotgun” cover letter format (commonly referred to as the “mass mailing” approach). Studies have shown that this format may not be very successful. To increase your chances of receiving a response, personalize each letter and identify your interest in career area(s). Ask for information and initiate the follow-up step. Enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope when asking for information.

- When you are investigating a specific job lead, construct the letter to show your abilities and how they can be applied to the position and organization. Make reference to specific information that you discovered through conversations and research. Example: “I am impressed by your continual growth through grant funded activities.” “My academic background in communications, combined with my experience in public relations, has prepared me for the position at XYZ.”

Dear Ms. Carlton,

OR

Dear Hiring Manager or Dear

Your first paragraph should state why you are contacting the employer. This is your first opportunity to initiate and build rapport with the employer. This paragraph should be used to capture the interest of the reader. You can also provide information such as: How you found out about the position, who referred you, and for what position you are applying.

Your second paragraph should include information that summarizes your relevant experience, applicable coursework, accomplishments and/or personal achievements that are related to the position. This information is as crucial as the information that is included in your actual resume. Although you may be proud of what you perceive as accomplishments, make careful consideration of what the employer will view as most intriguing. Tailor your cover letter to meet the employer’s needs. This information lets the employer know how your background matches the position. Refrain from writing one general cover letter for all positions. In today’s job market, this tactic does not work.

Your third paragraph should tell the employer that you will follow-up with him/her on a specific date in a specific way. Doing this lets the employer know what to expect. Many job seekers lose out on opportunities because of not wanting to be perceived as overly zealous. Even if you’re told that you are not the appropriate candidate for the job, hearing “no” is preferable to a lingering “maybe.” Be sure to include your phone number and e-mail address.

3251 Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the Human Resources Representative position advertised in the Georgia State University’s online recruiting website, Handshake. I will graduate in May with a Bachelor of Business Administration degree in Managerial Sciences from the J. Mack Robinson College of Business at Georgia State University. My academic training combined with my previous work experience make me an excellent candidate for your vacancy.

Through my internship in the Human Resources Department at Russell Reynolds Associates, I acquired an excellent understanding of the responsibilities and expectations associated with working in this field. This knowledge, combined with my computer proficiency (in Windows, Excel, and Access) allows me to be extremely innovative and efficient.

Additionally, I developed strong written and verbal communication skills through human resources activities such as drafting job postings, evaluations, and speaking to audiences of over 75 people.

I can be a valuable asset to Vanderbilt Consultants Human Resources Department. At your convenience, please feel free to contact me so I may provide you with additional information about why I would be a great fit for this position. I can be reached at (770) 555-1234.

Regards,

TARGETING YOUR RESUME

A strong, well-targeted resume alone doesn’t get you a job. It does, however, get you through a typical candidate screening process to a first interview. The same principles of resume-writing apply whether you are a seasoned executive or new to the job market, although the organization and verbiage of the resume may differ.

The essential components a good resume are:

- Your name, address, Contact Information
- Objective or qualifications summary
  - An objective should be used to focus on what you want to do for the employer, describes the skills you want to use on the job, expresses interest in an industry and is a career statement.
  - A summary is used in place of objectives when applicant has relevant work experiences and it is a series of statements that express what you have done and who you are.
- Experience (dates of employment, company, title, responsibilities, results)
- Education
- Skills and Accomplishments

Other qualities of a good resume include:

- Clean, legible format (10, 11 or 12 point font sans serif font and one inch margins)
- Succinct review of your work experience; total resume not to exceed 2 pages
- Use of action-oriented verbs to describe your responsibilities
- Listing of quantifiable results in the roles you’ve held
- Descriptions of your responsibilities that “map” easily to the requirements of the role for which you’re applying

It’s also important, for Web-based resumes, to use variations of keywords that a search engine or web crawler will pick up.

After you’ve drafted your resume, it’s best to let it sit for day or two before editing it. This can be a challenge if you’re under a tight deadline, but it will help you to catch errors and improve the structure and language you’ve used.

As you review your resume, ask yourself the following questions:

- Would I call this candidate for an interview for this job?
- Have I been compelling and accurate in myself-representation?
- Am I describing my experience using language that will be clear to someone who hasn’t worked at the companies where I have worked?

It’s ideal to have one or two trusted colleagues or friends review both your resume and the job announcement or description and suggest how you can strengthen it before you submit your application; their advice could be the difference between a first interview and a letter of rejection.

PREPPING YOUR REFERENCES

It's always wise to keep a running list of former and current colleagues who can serve as references for you, because you never know when you may need to call on them for help in a job search.

When you are building a list of references, think of people who will fit into three categories:

- Superiors (people for whom you have worked)
- Peers (people with whom you have worked)
- Subordinates (people who have worked for you)

Do your best to think of at least three people in each category. If you are early in your career, you may not yet have a list of subordinates.

Contact each person and ask if he/she is willing to serve as a reference for you.
Explain where you are in your job search and ensure your references that you will notify them if they will be getting a call from a potential employer.

If the person agrees to be a reference, make sure you have the following information on him/her:

- Name
- Current title
- Current company
- Direct phone number (either office or mobile)
- E-mail address
- Company at which you worked together
- Title at that company
- Your relationship/capacity in which you worked together

When you are asked for references by a potential employer, brainstorm a strategic list of four or five references from your pool. Decide which of your references will be best-suited to speak to your capabilities for the job at hand.

Then call those references, brief them on where you are in the interview process and what the potential issues are with your candidacy (e.g. the employer is concerned that I’m too young to do a job at this level, or I’ve never run a team of this size before).

Also, provide your references with a current copy of your resume and a copy of the job announcement or description so that they can speak as relevantly as possible about your skill set. Don’t be afraid to coach your references. They want to help you get the job, and you are the best person to equip them for that task.

PREPARING FOR A CAREER FAIR

How do I prepare for a career fair?

Getting the most out of career fairs starts well before the event. It begins with preparation – knowing yourself, your skills, qualifications, interests, values, goals, and career areas of interest. In addition, identifying employers you want to talk to and learning something about them is important. Last, but not least, you'll need to prepare a resume and dress for success! Here are some additional tips to help you prepare.

1. Dress in professional attire!
   - Men: A dark suit, white shirt, conservative tie, and dark polished dress shoes.
   - Women: A professional suit, possibly dark colored also. A low-heel pump is very practical. Minimal jewelry.
   - A portfolio may be carried to hold copies of your resume and to take notes.
   - Conservative attire is recommended because your goal is for employers to remember you, not your clothes!

2. Come prepared – resumes in hand and questions in mind!
   - Research the employers you are interested in and prepare questions to ask organization representatives. Company websites are a great place to start and you can find links to many employer websites on the Career Center website.
   - Be sure your nametag is on!
   - Be prepared to tell them about your major, your classification is (senior, junior etc.), and your professional interests.

3. Be Assertive and Positive!
   - Smile! Introduce yourself in a confident manner, offer a firm handshake, and offer them a copy of your resume.
   - Sell your skills, major, coursework, GPA, work experiences and extra-curricular activities in relation to their needs!
   - Highlight your interest in their organization by discussing the research you’ve done about their organization, and how your qualifications, and career goals fit into their culture.
   - Don’t forget to collect business cards and company literature.

4. Speak with as many representatives as possible
   - You will probably recognize many of the organizations by name, but there will be many you won’t. Don’t let that stop you from speaking with their representatives.
   - You may be interested in an organization, but they may not list your major as one they’re interested in. Don’t let that stop you from visiting their table either. Representatives will often pass your resume onto a different department or division within their organization, or provide you with the name of a person to contact.

5. Follow up!
   - Send a thank you letter, or e-mail to employer representatives you are interested in, thank them for their visit to campus, discuss your qualifications, and reiterate your interest!
   - Make sure you have completed your profile and have an approved resume on the HANDSHAKE so you can apply for campus interviews.

POLISHING YOUR PERSONAL PRESENTATION

Research shows that it only takes a fraction of a second to make a first impression – but that impression will stay with the person you meet in the course of an interview, and if it isn’t good you may not have enough time to correct it before the interview ends and the job search closes on another candidate.

How you come across when meeting people for the first time involves a complex matrix of factors such as etiquette, grooming, self-confidence, and character. It is worth understanding where you perform strongly in these areas and where you need to improve, and you can do this with the help of a trusted friend, colleague or career coach. If you are weak in any area of personal presentation, it affects the entire picture of who you are.

Etiquette
Etiquette is something that we practice constantly, whether or not we realize it. Our greetings, conversations, correspondence, meals and travel are opportunities to become more aware of how we come across professionally and where we stand to improve.

Take a moment to review the following:
• Everyday courtesies that you extend to others
• Your attitude, particularly in the face of challenging or unplanned situations
• Your choice of words
• Your choice of conversation content
• How well you verbalize support for colleagues’ and friends’ efforts
• How well you listen

If an honest self-assessment tells you that you are a courteous, positive, well-spoken, sensitive, and supportive colleague who listens well and often, then you are on your way to success in the job market.

Most of us, however, have areas in which we need to improve – and the more time we spend raising our awareness and raising the bar on our behavior, the sooner we’ll start making a good impression 100% of the time.

For help in understanding where you need to improve in terms of etiquette, seek out a trusted friend, colleague or career counselor from whom you are willing to take constructive criticism, and ask for three things that you should (1) keep doing; (2) stop doing; and (3) start doing. It’s a good strategy for receiving balanced feedback that you can use to improve your professional impact.

Self-confidence
It takes less than a minute for the people we meet to make a head-to-toe assessment of us – and during that time non-verbal cues and tone of voice make up at least 90% of any spoken message we deliver.

It’s important to understand how you come across in a first meeting, because you always run the risk of leading with too much confidence and getting labeled as aggressive or leading with too little confidence and getting labeled as shy – neither of which is a sought-after executive quality.

If you learn how to read people and situations accurately and adapt your response accordingly, you’ll do well in interviews. It takes practice, but if you seek honest feedback from trusted friends, colleagues or a career coach, you’ll master the art of conveying self-confidence.

Business Attire

Men and Women

- Conservative two-piece matching business suit (black, gray, navy, or beige)
- Conservative LONG-SLEEVED, collared shirt/blouse (white is best, pastel is next best)
- Tailored pantsuits are acceptable
- Clean, polished conservative shoes
- Clean, well-groomed hair style
- Clean trimmed fingernails
- Lightweight briefcase or portfolio case
- No visible body piercing (nose rings, eyebrow rings, etc.) or tattoos
- Minimal or preferably no cologne or perfume
- Empty pockets—no bulges or jingling
- No gum, candy, cigarettes, beepers, or cellular phones that may distract

Men

- Necktie should have a conservative pattern and end mid-belt
- Dark shoes (black lace-ups are best)—no loafers
- Dark socks with matching color belt (black is best)
- Short hair always fares best in interviews
- Beards and mustaches are a possible negative, but if you must, make it neat and trimmed
- No rings other than college and wedding ring
- No earrings (if you normally wear one or more, take it/them out)

Women

- Knee-length skirts are best; tailored pantsuits are acceptable
- Sensible low-heeled dress shoes (no high heels or sandals)
- Conservative hosiery at or near skin color
- No more than one ring on each hand
- Only one set of conservative non-dangling earrings
- Minimal makeup; it should not call attention to itself
- If you wear nail polish (not required), use a clear or conservative color
- Pull long hair back from the face with a clasp at the neck
- No purses of any size; carry a briefcase or portfolio instead, no sandals.

Business Casual

Men

- Dress slacks, cotton chinos or khakis (pressed)
- High-quality crew-neck or turtleneck sweaters
- Long-sleeved sport shirts (tie is not necessary)
- A blazer or sport coat, usually navy or black (optional)
- Dress leather belt
- Patterned or colored socks in a heavier knit than dress socks
- Loafers or other shined shoes that bridge the gap between casual and dress

Women

- A twin sweater set in neutral colors, cotton button-down shirts in solids and stripes, mix-and-match knit separates, wool turtlenecks, tailored blouse or a lightweight wool blazer (optional)
- Skirt or slacks in a neutral color
- A tailored pantsuit or a tailored dress with sleeves or jacket
- Casual, low-heeled shoes or flats, no sandals
Managing Your Virtual Brand

The explosion of social media sites has significant implications for job seekers!

Did you know the majority of prospective employers and recruiters regularly visit social media sites to source candidates and learn more about potential hires they interview?

“How clear is your Social Media Background?”

Did you know: More employers are using firms that check applicants’ social media history.

Your Facebook profile picture is of you holding a rifle. You post on your Twitter feed: I really hope these pills help to knock me out, because I sure need them.

Each of these may be innocent: The rifle is registered. You are the president of the local National Rifle Association. You just had a tooth pulled and were just given pain medicine. Even so, you would fail a Social Media Check.

What is it? The social media check is becoming an automatic part of the hiring process, just as criminal background checks and drug tests. Employers regularly run quick Google searches on applicants. Organizations are contracting with corporations across the country to institute standard social media background checks.

What do they look for? Anything that will make you a questionable hire: flagrant display of weapons, sexually explicit photos, racist remarks, references to drug use, statements supporting violence, etc.

Remember fads come and go. Social media is no different. Remember MySpace? We may not realize the personal trail we leave on the Internet that can come back and hurt us in the future.

The checks reveal bad tracks you’ve left online, but can only find what you’ve left behind. If a potential employer flags your social media history, you have no one to blame but yourself.

A job candidate should spend as much time polishing an online profile as he or she does choosing the perfect suit for an interview.

How can you create a positive online presence?

REMEMBER: It may not be a bad thing, documenting your life and personality online. Just remember that a potential employer may not think those status, tweet, or blog updates discussing unlawful activity is as funny as your peers do.

Guidelines for creating a positive virtual brand

We recommend Robinson students utilize the following guidelines to pro-actively manage your virtual brand on any social media site you actively utilize in order to advance your career. Investing the time necessary to develop, monitor and enhance your virtual brand is a requirement for any professional who is actively or passively seeking employment.

Profiles – Think of your profile as your on-line business card. It is important for your profile to convey a professional message about you as a potential employee. We suggest you review and edit any information which does not meet this standard. After you complete this process, we encourage you to identify a professional you trust to review your information and provide you with feedback.

Friends – Keep in mind it is important to monitor the content on your friends’ pages who you are linked to. We suggest you review their profiles and any pictures they may post of you to determine if there is any inappropriate content you would like removed.

Privacy Settings – Facebook in particular has been known to change their privacy settings often. As a result, it is important for you to review these regularly to make sure only friends have access to view your profile. You also want to take a close look at the search, news feed, applications, photos and video settings to determine how much information you want to share.

Monitor New Information – It is a good idea to use multiple search engines to find out what employers might be able to find if the search on your name. If you find anything which could be detrimental you can look into having it removed.

Voicemail – Be sure the voicemail greeting on your phone is professional. Every form of communication sends a message to prospective employers.

LinkedIn – The focus of this site is professional networking and they have strict rules about how to use the system in order to connect with people. Make sure you understand how to leverage this site in order to expand your network. In addition, many employers are now posting jobs based on your profile so this could be a great tool if you are actively seeking.

Twitter – This site was designed to be an open forum. Make sure you know who is “following” you and be sure you tailor the content of your “tweets” to the right audience.

Statistics

- Twitter has 310 million users.
- Facebook has more than 1.5 billion users.
- LinkedIn has over 100 million users in over 200 countries.
- Instagram has over 400 million users.
ACING THE INTERVIEW

Objectives

- To help you find out the information you need to know, in order to decide whether or not you want to work there.
- To help the employer find out the information they need to know, to decide whether or not they want to hire you.

Overview of Interview Process

Before the Interview

- Research the position for which you will be interviewing
- Research the organization/employer thoroughly
- Obtain interviewer(s) name and title
- Confirm the time/date/location of the interview
- Identify your skills that relate to the job; review your resume and be able to elaborate on it
- Review frequently asked questions, practice interviewing and request feedback from others for improving your interviewing skills; do a mock interview!
- Prepare questions to ask the interviewer
- Know the general salary range for the position
- Dress for Success!

During the Interview

- Arrive early and bring extra copies of your resume
- Relax; Be yourself; Be positive
- Follow the lead of the interviewer (Don’t try to take over the interview)
- Listen closely to the interviewer’s questions; ask for clarification if needed
- Be concise in your answers; give concrete answers to back up your claims
- Never slight a former employee or colleague
- Be aware of your posture and body language; watch your grammar
- Be sure to clarify any follow-up arrangements

After the Interview

- Write a thank-you letter to the interviewer(s) within 24 hours after the interview.

You can send it via e-mail or regular mail. Use your best judgment or ask the Career Advancement Center for advice if you are unsure of which method to choose. At a minimum, the letter should thank the interviewer for their time and consideration. However, it may also include additional information or reiterate your interest in the company/position.

- Evaluate your performance by asking yourself questions such as: How well did I present my qualifications? Did I use clear, concrete examples?

- What points did I make that seemed to interest the interviewer? How can I improve my next interview?

- Follow up via phone to find out the status of your application if the employer has not contacted you within the time frame stated

- Follow-up may be necessary even after the thank you letter. If you have not heard from the interviewer/employer in 5-10 business days you may want to take the initiative to contact them and get a better idea of their timeline or process. Keep in mind that you don’t want to be pushy or come across as a pest. Once again, use your best judgment or come to the Career Management Center for advice when deciding when to follow-up and what method is most appropriate (phone, e-mail or letter).
BEHAVIORAL INTERVIEWING

The behavioral interview is designed to minimize personal impressions that can affect the hiring decision. By focusing on the applicant’s actions and behaviors rather than subjective impressions that can sometimes be misleading, interviewers can make more accurate hiring decisions.

"Tell me about a time when you were on a team and one of the members wasn't carrying his or her weight." If this is one of the leading questions in your job interview, you could be in for a behavioral interview. Based on the premise that the best way to predict future behavior is to determine past behavior, this style of interviewing is gaining wide acceptance among recruiters.

Today, more than ever, every hiring decision is critical. Behavioral interviewing is designed to minimize personal impressions that can affect the hiring decision. By focusing on the applicant's actions and behaviors, rather than subjective impressions that can sometimes be misleading, interviewers can make more accurate hiring decisions.

James F. Reder, manager of staff planning and college relations for Occidental Chemical Corporation in Dallas, says, "Although we have not conducted any formal studies to determine whether retention or success on the job here has been affected, I feel our move to behavioral interviewing has been successful. It helps concentrate recruiters' questions on areas important to our candidates' success within Occidental." The company introduced behavioral interviewing in 1986 at several sites and has since implemented it company-wide.

Behavioral vs. Traditional Interviews

Traditional and behavioral interviews differ in several ways. If you have training or experience with traditional interviewing techniques, you may find the behavioral interview quite different in several ways:

- Instead of asking how you would behave in a particular situation, the interviewer will ask you to describe how you did behave in a real-life situation.
- Expect the interviewer to question and probe, with questions like: "How did you feel?" "What was your role?" "What was the result?"
- The interviewer will ask you to provide details. Be specific. Give a detailed accounting of one event.
- The interview will be a more structured process that will concentrate on areas that are important to the interviewer, rather than allowing you to concentrate on areas that you may feel are important.
- You may not get a chance to deliver any prepared stories.
- Most interviewers will be taking copious notes throughout the interview.

The behavioral interviewer has been trained to objectively collect and evaluate information, and works from a profile of desired behaviors that are needed for success on the job. Because the behaviors a candidate has demonstrated in previous similar positions are likely to be repeated, you will be asked to share situations in which you may or may not have exhibited these behaviors. Your answers will be tested for accuracy and consistency.

Preparing for a Behavioral Interview

Instead of feeling anxious or threatened by the prospect of a behavioral interview, just keep in mind how the traditional interview and the behavioral interview differ: The traditional interviewer may allow you to theorize about hypothetical situations, but the behavioral interviewer is looking at past actions only. Regardless, it will be important to put your best foot forward and make a good impression on the interviewer with appropriate attire, good grooming, a firm handshake and direct eye contact. There is no substitute for promptness, courtesy, preparation, enthusiasm, and a positive attitude.

- Recall recent situations that show favorable behaviors or actions, especially involving course work, work experience, leadership, teamwork, initiative, planning, and customer service.
- Prepare short descriptions of each situation; be ready to give details if asked.
- Be sure each story you tell has a beginning, middle, and end.
- Be sure the outcome or result reflects positively on you (even if the result itself was not favorable).
- Be honest. The interviewer will find out if your story is built on a weak foundation.
LEARN TO USE THE STAR INTERVIEW SYSTEM

The STAR technique will help you learn how to describe the situation, your task in it, your action and the result or outcome by remembering the acronym STAR:

★ Situation – Recently, I was part of a group project in my Organizational Communications class. We had an assignment to design an effective public relations campaign for a fictitious company.

★ Task – We chose to market a bank opening a new office in a small community. We had to come up with a marketing plan and media kit designed to introduce the company to its new community and to solicit new bank customers.

★ Action – As the project team leader, I set up an appointment with the Director of Marketing at XYZ Bank and got her insight on the project. After the meeting, I came up with a creative marketing plan, which was enthusiastically received by the other group members. I then assigned each group member a particular task, based on his or her area of expertise. For example, one member of our group was responsible for designing the bank’s logo and another member was responsible for writing a press release. I monitored the group’s progress to make sure we were meeting our deadlines and also put together a strong oral presentation to make to the class.

★ Result – The project was lots of fun and allowed me to develop the management skills necessary to lead a very diverse group of 6 people. The most rewarding part was that our group received the highest marks in the class and the professor currently uses our project materials as an example to his classes.

Sample STAR Technique Response

A possible response for the question, "Tell me about a time when you were on a team and a member wasn't pulling his or her weight" might go as follows:

"I had been assigned to a team to build a canoe out of concrete. One of our team members wasn’t showing up for our lab sessions or doing his assignments. I finally met with him in private, explained the frustration of the rest of the team, and asked if there was anything I could do to help. He told me he was preoccupied with another class that he wasn’t passing, so I found someone to help him with the other course. He not only was able to spend more time on our project, but he was also grateful to me for helping him out. We finished our project on time, and got a 'B' on it."

The interviewer might then probe: "How did you feel when you confronted this person?" "Exactly what was the nature of the project?" "What was his responsibility as a team member?" "What was your role?" "At what point did you take it upon yourself to confront him?" You can see it is important that you not make up or "shade" information, and why you should have a clear memory of the entire incident."
SAMPLE BEHAVIORAL QUESTIONS

1. Give a specific example of when you had to gain the cooperation of others, and what challenges you faced. What was the outcome? What was the long-term impact on your ability to work with this group?

2. Tell me about a course, work experience, or extracurricular activity where you had to work closely with others. How did it go? How did you overcome any difficulties?

3. Give me a specific example of a time when you had to address an angry customer. What was the problem and what was the outcome? How would you assess your role in defusing the situation?

4. Tell me about a suggestion you made to improve job processes/operations. What was the result?

5. Describe the most significant or creative presentation/idea that you developed/implemented.

6. Tell me about a time when you took a risk in creating a new process or program? What was the situation and what did you do?

7. By providing examples, demonstrate that you can adapt to a wide variety of people, situations and/or environments.

8. Tell me about a decision you made while under a lot of pressure.

9. Talk about a time when there was a decision to be made and procedures were not in place? What was the outcome?

10. What are 3 effective leadership qualities you think are important? How have you demonstrated these qualities in your past/current position?

11. Describe a situation in which you were able to use persuasion to successfully convince someone to approach things your way. What level was the person you had to persuade?

12. What have you done in your present/previous job that goes beyond what was required?

13. Tell me about a time when you had to resolve a difference of opinion with a co-worker/customer/supervisor. How do you feel you showed respect?

14. Describe the way you handled a specific problem involving others with differing values, ideas and beliefs in your current/previous job.

15. Describe a work situation that required you to really listen and display compassion to a co-worker/employee who was telling you about a personal/sensitive situation.

16. Can you recall a time when you gave feedback to a co-worker who was unaccepting of others?

17. Can you recall a time when a person’s cultural background affected your approach to a work situation?

18. Tell me about a specific time when you had to handle a tough problem which challenged fairness or ethical issues.

19. Tell me about a tough decision you made. What steps, thought processes, and considerations did you take to make an objective decision?

20. If you can, tell me about a time when your trustworthiness was challenged. How did you react/respond?
EVALUATING AND NEGOTIATING A JOB OFFER

STEP 1 – PREPARATION

✓ Before you can assess a job offer, you must make sure you have information about the market. Important information includes: salary averages for your field and in your geographic area of interest, average salaries that your peers received, norms in your field such as where you can push in negotiation, and which things are non-negotiable such as benefits or stock options. You can find this information in the Occupational Outlook Handbook, Web sites, Career Advancement Center, and through your professional network.

✓ Identify and rank your value issues. This will help you remember an offer is not just about salary, but about what you value in a position. The issues may include:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Responsibility</th>
<th>Flexibility</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Stability</td>
<td>Benefits</td>
<td>Prestige</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Independence</td>
<td>Supervisory Style</td>
<td>Public Contact</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mental Stimulation</td>
<td>Teamwork</td>
<td>Salary</td>

<tr>
<td>Personal Growth</td>

<td>Making Decisions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Low Stress Level</td>
<td>Variety</td>
<td>Helping Others</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Challenge</td>
<td>Competition</td>
<td>Physical Work</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

STEP 2 – KNOW THE EMPLOYER’S COMPENSATION GUIDELINES

✓ How does a job offer process develop? Although there are many ways to deliver an offer, they are typically presented from one of three different viewpoints:

- Fixed Offer: You can negotiate all you want, but it won’t do you any good. They operate on a take it or leave it basis so you may not want to waste your time negotiating.

- Pay-Grade System: This is a system in which a salary range has been set and you will be paid within this range based on your experience and the duties associated with the job. You may be able to negotiate within the salary range. The pay-grade system is the most common compensation system encountered.

- The Negotiator: This type of system is rare because most organizations work within a structure. In this framework, the employer will have the authority to raise or lower your salary without going through bureaucratic red tape.

STEP 3 – SALARY AND BENEFIT NEGOTIATION

✓ If an employer makes an offer that is below your expectation, clarify what the benefits are. If the offer still isn’t competitive, try one of these approaches:

Approach 1: I’m very interested in the role, but I would like to discuss the salary you’re offering.

Approach 2: I really want this position, but I was a little disappointed the offer was lower than I expected.

✓ When using either approach, be certain to support your case by stating your skills, the average salary range for your level of experience in your field and the average salaries for GSU graduates in your field. Let the employer respond and then continue the discussion from their lead.

✓ Based on an employer’s compensation guidelines, you may not be able to negotiate a higher salary. However, you may be able to increase your compensation via benefits. Negotiable areas often include: vacation time (it’s often increased for more senior employees), educational reimbursement, flex time, and salary review (you might negotiate a salary review after three months rather than six months or a year). Remember, you may be negotiating with the person who will be your supervisor. Stay polite. Try to make it a win-win situation.
STEP 4 – ASSESSING THE JOB OFFER

✓ Consider the pros and the cons of the offer. It may help to create a chart. A chart may also be helpful if you have had more than one offer and you want to compare and contrast the merits of each offer.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>FACTOR</th>
<th>OFFER A</th>

</tr>
</tbody>

STEP 5 – GET IT IN WRITING!

✓ It would be nice if everything discussed would actually occur, but unfortunately it doesn’t always happen that way. To avoid problems in the future, ask for a letter of employment which states all the employment conditions agreed upon (i.e. salary and benefits as well as a thorough job description). This way, if there is confusion at a later date, you will have a written document to refer to stating the conditions under which you were hired. This document is especially important if the conditions of your employment differ from normal company policies.

A FINAL WORD

✓ Keep in mind that if you decide to negotiate, your job offer will not be rescinded by the employer, even if he/she decides not to negotiate. Also, if a position is acceptable to you as it is offered, you should not feel like you must negotiate.
JOB ACCEPTANCE LETTER

Even if you have accepted a job over the phone, it's a good idea to write a job acceptance letter to confirm the details of employment and to formally accept the job offer.

Your letter can be brief, but, should include the following:

- Thanks and appreciation for the opportunity
- Written acceptance of the job offer
- The terms and conditions of employment (salary, benefits)
- Starting date of employment

Address the letter to the person who offered you the position. Include your contact information and phone number, even though it is on file with the employer.

Make sure that your letter is well written and does not contain typos or grammatical errors. Even though you already have been offered the job, you want to make sure all your correspondence is professional.

Dear Mr. Barnes,

As we discussed on the phone, I am very pleased to accept the position of Marketing Manager with Smithfield Pottery. Thank you for the opportunity. I am eager to make a positive contribution to the company and to work with everyone on the Smithfield team.

As we discussed, my starting salary will be $35,000 and health and life insurance benefits will be provided after 90 days of employment.

I look forward to starting employment on July 1, 2008. If there is any additional information or paperwork you need prior to then, please let me know.

Again, thank you.

JOB REJECTION LETTER

When you have decided to reject a job offer, you may want to let the employer know in writing that you are declining the offer. Your letter should be polite, brief, and to the point. You don’t want to burn bridges and this employer may have a better offer for you down the road. So, don’t get into any specifics. Even if the hours are awful, the work environment is terrible or the pay isn’t enough to make ends meet, don’t mention it.

You should include the following:

- Thanks and appreciation for the offer
- Written rejection of the job offer
- Address the letter to the person who offered you the position. Include your contact information and phone number, even though it is on file with the employer.

Make sure that your letter is well written and does not contain typos or grammatical errors.

Even though you are declining the job the job, you want to make sure all your correspondence is professional.

ONGOING CAREER ADVANCEMENT

Begin with the end in mind.
~ Stephen Covey

THE CAREER ADVANCEMENT CYCLE

It takes a lifetime of choices to build a career – and it takes self-awareness, focus and discipline to make the choices that lead to a fulfilling career.

In all likelihood, the job you have today is the result of not just one choice, but many cumulative and intersecting choices that all have a bearing on your career path: where you live, where you’ve gone to school, what courses you’ve taken, and who you’ve met along the way.

The wisdom of those choices depends in large part on how well you understand yourself within the following dimensions:

- Values
- Interests
- Skills
- Experience

Ongoing career advancement involves clarifying your values, pursuing your interests, building your skills, and expanding your base of experience – all against the backdrop of the network of relationships that you build and within the context of the career plan that you develop.

From time to time, it’s valuable to examine where you are in your career, and where you’d like to go. In this way, you create a conscious cycle of career management that is driven not by external circumstances but by your internal compass of values, interests, skills and experience.

The Mission Statement on the following page is an exercise adapted from Stephen Covey’s book The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People, designed to help you clarify your values.

The Career Action Plan which follows will help you outline next steps in your career advancement process. Both of these exercises will be valuable to you, wherever you are on your career path. If you take some time periodically to envision where you want to go in your career and the qualities you want to embody along the way, you’ll reap the benefits.
YOUR PERSONAL MISSION STATEMENT

A personal mission statement is a bit different from a company mission statement, but the fundamental principles are the same. Writing a personal mission statement offers the opportunity to establish what’s important and perhaps make a decision to stick to it before we even start a career. Or it enables us to chart a new course when we’re at a career crossroads. Stephen Covey (in First Things First) refers to developing a mission statement as, “connecting with your own unique purpose and the profound satisfaction that comes from fulfilling it.”

A personal mission statement helps job-seekers identify their core values and beliefs. Michael Goodman (in The Potato Chip Difference: How to Apply Leading Edge Marketing Strategies to Landing the Job You Want) states that a personal mission statement is “an articulation of what you’re all about and what success looks like to you.” A personal mission statement also allows job-seekers to identify companies that have similar values and beliefs and helps them better assess the costs and benefits of any new career opportunity.

The biggest problem most job-seekers face is not in wanting to have a personal mission statement, but actually writing it. So, to help you get started on your personal mission statement, here is a five-step mission-building process. Take as much time on each step as you need -- and remember to dig deeply to develop a mission statement that is both authentic and honest. And to help you better see the process, we’ve included an example of one job-seeker’s process in developing her mission statement.

Toward A Personal Mission Statement

Step 1: Identify Past Successes. Spend some time identifying four or five examples where you have had personal success in recent years. These successes could be at work, in your community, at home, etc. Write them down. Try to identify whether there is a common theme -- or themes -- to these examples. Write them down.

Step 2: Identify Core Values. Develop a list of attributes that you believe identify who you are and what your priorities are. The list can be as long as you need. Once your list is complete, see if you can narrow your values to five or six most important values. Finally, see if you can choose the one value that is most important to you.

Step 3: Identify Contributions. Make a list of the ways you could make a difference. In an ideal situation, how could you contribute best to: the world in general; your family; your employer or future employers; your friends; your community.

Step 4: Identify Goals. Spend some time thinking about your priorities in life and the goals you have for yourself. Make a list of your personal goals, perhaps in the short-term (up to three years) and the long-term (beyond three years).

Step 5: Write Mission Statement. Based on the first four steps and a better understanding of yourself, begin writing your personal mission statement.

Sample Mission Statement: To live life completely, honestly, and compassionately, with a healthy dose of realism mixed with the imagination and vision that all things are possible if we orient ourselves toward the answer.
